FALL-SINCLAIR OIL CASE ENDS IN A MISTRIAL

CHARGES OF ALLEGED JURY TAMPERING MADE

MEANWHILE, A GRAND JURY IS INVESTIGATING CHARGES
MADE

GOVERNMENT LAWYERS TO
START CASE AGAIN AS SOON
AS POSSIBLE

Washington, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy trial ended prematurely today. Justice Frederick L. Siddons announced a mistrial as a result of charges of attempted jury tampering. Meanwhile, a grand jury investigated the charges in another room of the same courthouse.

Government lawyers said they intended to start again as soon as possible—in a few weeks or months—their tremendous and costly effort to send Harry F. Sinclair, oil millionaire and sportsman, and Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, to prison on charges of conspiring to defraud the government in making the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve lease.

Owen J. Roberts, government counsel, definitely announced he would ask for a new trial for January. He notified defense counsel informally immediately after court adjourned. His original intention was to make the motion in open court today, but the judge adjourned the session before he could speak. Roberts will present his request to the judge privately later in the day.

The trial ended dramatically in its 13th day as a result of four affidavits submitted by government counsel that one juror boasted he expected to profit from an acquittal and that 15 or 16 Burns detectives were dogging the footsteps of jurors, making contacts with their friends and acquaintances, and investigating their financial standing. One affidavit charged Sinclair was the real employer of the detectives.

Justice Siddons advised Juror Edward Kidwell of the fact that two affidavits made charges involving him, which he was at liberty to examine. Then he reviewed his consideration of the government charges.

"The jury panel is discharged," Siddons said at 10:20 o'clock, after which court adjourned.

Within half an hour after the jury was discharged, Kidwell was summoned before the grand jury investigating the jury tampering efforts charged by the government. The young leather worker, after denying to reporters that he made the damaging statements attributed to him in government affidavits, went immediately to the district attorneys office, a few feet from the grand jury room. The other eleven jurors, it is understood, have been summoned to appear before the grand jury.

At the opening of court, Siddons ordered the jury brought in to hear for the first time of the sensational charges of jury tampering which had been laid before Siddons yesterday morning. Harry F. Sinclair came jauntily into court and was smiling. He was followed soon by his co-defendant, Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior.

For 10 minutes Justice Siddons talked of the charges which had brought to a sudden and unforeseen end the government's attempt to convict Fall and Sinclair of conspiracy. His talk done, he dismissed the jury and another of the steps in the long chain of the oil case was temporarily ended.

Justice Siddons declared that the wide publicity given the affidavits on jury tampering furnished "additional reason" for his declaring a mistrial.

Juror Edward Kidwell, whose talk of expectation of receiving a "car as long as this block" in event of an acquittal, was one of the bases of the mistrial, did not leave the court room with the other jurors.

RUTH ELDER TO FLY OVER OCEAN AGAIN NEXT YEAR

Paris, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Undaunted by the catastrophe of the plane American Girl, Ruth Elder announced today she expected to be the first flyer to take off on a trans-Atlantic trip next spring.

Resplendent in a brand new frock and with a chic cloche hat clamped snugly over her crisp hair, the bewitching girl from Lakeland, Fla., admitted that she was very happy again to be attired in feminine raiment, but explained:

"Naturally I am very happy to be visiting the dressmakers and shops but flying is my game and I'll never be satisfied until I have flown across the Atlantic."

WICKY HANSON GOES ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

CLAIMS HE SHOT JAMES BARRETT IN SELF DEFENSE

BARRETT SAID TO HAVE MURDERED TEN PERSONS IN ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Arthur (Wicky) Hanson today went on trial before Judge Carlton F. McNally in Ramsey county district court for the murder of James Barrett, who was shot to death here Aug. 14.

Hanson was indicted Oct. 13, shortly after he had confessed to killing Barrett in self-defense after Barrett had told him how he had murdered ten other persons in St. Paul during the past 18 months.

After an investigation which began when Hanson confessed Sept. 27 to murdering Barrett, the prosecution marshalled approximately 50 witnesses under subpoena and who were in court today.

Approximately 30 witnesses called by the defense were in court today.

The block-long car, Kidwell only answered, "I have nothing to say."

The debonair Sinclair and former Secretary Fall registered no visible emotion at the verdict. Fall said he would have a statement soon.

Smiling, the 11 other members of the jury walked out of the court room, finally discharged from their jury service.

Immediately after court adjourned Conrad J. Herzog, 56, juror and automobile sales manager, stepped up to Roberts.

"Eleven of us on the jury feel we have been placed under a serious cloud in this matter and that something ought to be done to vindicate us," Herzog said.

"We have no question about 10 out of the 12," Roberts replied. "We think you are an intelligent body and that you have seriously undertaken your responsibilities, and this jury is going to be vindicated. But some disgraceful things have happened, and we want your help in getting at the bottom of it. You are one of the most responsible men on this jury and you can be of great assistance."

"The jury felt very badly about this," Herzog said. "Only last night a lady told me she had read that detectives were following us and it looked very bad."

"The government has not spent a plugged nickel to watch you people," Roberts said. "When you were told by the court not to read that case or to discuss it, we took you at par," Roberts said.

"I can say that I did not," Herzog said.

"We hadn't the slightest notion that the town was plastered with people chasing you around," Roberts said.

"I never said a word about Sinclair or an automobile, although they (King and Akers) tried to lead me on," Kidwell told reporters.

District Attorney Peyton Gordon announced the entire jury would be called before the grand jury investigating the alleged jury-tampering efforts.

King and Akers, Kidwell said, tried to get him drunk last Saturday, when, according to the affidavits,

INSURGENTS IN LEGISLATURE 'REST ON THEIR OARS'

EXTRAORDINARY SESSION REQUESTED IN OKLAHOMA

POSSIBILITY OF A POLITICAL PROBE IS DISCOUNTED

By DON A. HIGGINS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 2.—While insurgent legislators "rested on oars" in their move toward a requested extraordinary session of the legislature, administration friends and the capital city press today mildly "pooh-poohed" probability of a political probe.

One political writer averred: "Some few hopeful souls among those who have been demanding a special session were still insisting the movement is not dead."

"But among politicians generally there was a feeling that the two voluminous statements put forth by E. P. Hill and H. Tom Kight had given the movement its death blow."

The writer referred to the listed allegations of political confusion made public by those two legislative leaders.

Still another observer characterized the movement as "collapsed" and expressed the belief that the formal petition would be presented as a closing gesture but hinted therewith the insurgents would wave good bye to hopes. There was also continued gossip that Hill and Kight were not as harmonious as they would be expected to be.

Meanwhile, Kight has retired to his home in Claremore to "rest on oars," while cleaning up matters of his law practice and Hill was apparently doing the same thing in his stronghold in McAlester.

It remains to be seen whether the two are mustering a surprise.

Governor Henry S. Johnston has not yet received from either Kight or Hill the petition asking the call, his secretary, H. E. Sullivan, said today.

Sullivan added that unless one of them takes the trouble to write the governor, it was doubtful whether Johnston will make any reply to the general statements, as he had indicated he would do.

The administration friends also claimed messages were continuing to come in from over the state assuring the governor there was no sentiment for a special session.

'CANNIBAL SHIP' WAS DEATH FOR ONE WOMAN ABOARD

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 2.—(UP)—One woman went to her death with the 12 members of the crew of the Japanese fishing smack Fyoei Maru, the "cannibal ship" picked up Monday morning off Cape Flattery after drifting across the Pacific ocean from the Japanese fishing banks.

This discovery was made today by quarantine officials at Port Townsend, where the craft has been in quarantine since it was towed into the sound.

A woman's purse containing 10 Japanese coppers and torn bits of clothing, unmistakably belonging to a woman, leaves no doubt that a woman was aboard, the officials said.

WEDDING POSTPONED TO AVOID PUBLICITY

Cologne, Germany, Nov. 2.—(UP)—A dispatch from Bonn declared today that the wedding of 63-year-old Princess of Schaumburg-Lippe, sister of the ex-kaiser, to the young Russian Alexander Zoubkoff had been postponed until mid-November in hope of avoiding publicity.

The wedding was scheduled to be solemnized today.

Balchen, a former Norwegian naval lieutenant, was offered the post after Clarence Chamberlin, pilot of the Columbia's trans-ocean flight, had refused it.

R. C. PATTERSON DENIES HIS DEATH IN PENNSYLVANIA

ST. CROIX FALLS, WIS., HURLER
ONCE PITCHER FOR BRAINERD

CLAIMED HE HAD BEEN ILL AND FOUND WANDERING STREETS

St. Croix Falls, Wis., Nov. 2.—(UP)—Roy C. Patterson, pitcher for the Chicago White Sox during the period of 1900 to 1906 and once a pitcher for the Brainerd city team, smilingly denied that he was dead, and laughed aloud but was pleased at the manner in which his former fellow-ball players implored upon the officials of the city to give him an elaborate funeral.

Patterson was reported to have died Saturday at the Montgomery county, Pennsylvania home. The story of his death claimed he had been found ill and wandering the streets of Bridgeport, Pa., about two weeks ago, and was sent to the alms house.

Following his retirement from baseball, Patterson bought a farm near here, and is comfortably enjoying the publicity resultant to the story of his "death."

Patterson likewise denied being in Pennsylvania for several years.

FORESTALL APPARENT ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP RAILWAY TRAIN

Massapequa, N. Y., Nov. 2.—(UP)—What was apparently an attempt to blow up a Long Island railroad train was forestalled today when a track walker found 100 sticks of dynamite under the third rail at a joint just east of the village limits.

Police believed the dynamite had been placed there in the expectation that it would explode with the passing of an eastbound train. Three trains had sped by without harm, however.

APPEAL MADE FOR 10 PER CENT CORPORATION TAX

DR. C. S. DUNCAN, ECONOMIST OF RAIL EXECUTIVES, IS HEARD

APPEARS BEFORE HOUSE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE

Washington, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Possibility that a contemplated corporation tax reduction will permit reduction in railroad rates was discussed by the house ways and means committee today when Dr. C. S. Duncan, economist for the Association of Railway Executives, appeared for a 10 per cent corporation tax.

Duncan declared he could not promise reduction of freight or passenger rates but that reduction of the corporation tax from the present 13½ per cent to 10 per cent would cut $28,500,000 from the railroads' annual tax bill. This reduction in cost of operation would be considered by the interstate commerce commission in fixing any new rates, he said.

Duncan declared that railroads in 1924 paid $1.06 in taxes for every dollar declared in dividends, while other corporations paid only 54 cents in taxes for every dollar net profit.

Representatives of many important industries appealed to the committee in behalf of the democratic proposal to reduce the corporation tax to 10 per cent.

Frank G. Wisner of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, W. L. Crounse, druggist and Leaf Tobacco Association representative, and H. L. Ganby of the National Coal Association, agreed with Duncan in favor of the democratic proposal.

The only appeal so far received by the committee for retention of the present corporation tax rate came from Chester Gray, representing the American Farm Bureau Federation. He declared debt reduction should be undertaken first, and held that present tax burdens are not equally distributed on the basis of ability to pay. Gray also urged abolition of the automobile tax, saying the automobile is a farmer's necessity.

'RIGHT TO KILL' RAISED AS DEFENSE

London, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The second "right to kill" case within two weeks has come before an English court with the arraignment at Tonbridge of Mrs. Margaret B. Delvigne, 34, a war time nurse. She is charged with maliciously administering arsenic to her mother, Mrs. S. M. Waite, wife of one of the largest hop growers in Kent.

According to police Mrs. Delvigne confessed she gave the arsenic "to save my mother weeks of agony she otherwise would have suffered before dying of malignant cancer of the liver."

"I am sure I have done the right thing," she said.

The arsenic did not kill her mother, medical examiners reported.

Recently a jury acquitted a laborer who drowned his four-year-old daughter to end her suffering from pneumonia and tuberculosis. The "right to kill" had been raised as a defense.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR RANSOM OPENED WITH MOUNTAIN MOORS

Rabat, Morocco, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Formal negotiations were opened today for the ransom of four Frenchwomen and two Frenchmen held captive by hostile mountain Moors.

The women are reported to be suffering from cold and poor food. Envoys from the French government and the tribesmen are conducting the negotiations at Kliba.

FIGHT ON AT ST. LOUIS FOR FEDERAL FARM AID

RESOLUTIONS WITH SIGNIFICANCE OF POLITICAL PLATFORM

AWAIT ENDORSEMENT OF THE MIDDLE WEST AND SOUTHERN FARM LEADERS

By FOSTER EATON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 2.—A resolution with the significance of a political platform awaited the endorsement here today of 300 middle west and southern leaders in the fight to obtain federal farm aid.

It embodies a demand for earliest possible passage of a bill embracing the general features of the McNary-Haugen bill sent to the White House by the last congress and vetoed by President Coolidge.

A committee of 29 presided over by Governor Adam McMullen of Nebraska, an ardent advocate of the vetoed bill, worked until after midnight whipping the resolution into shape.

Full significance of the document lies in the fact that membership of the committee is wholeheartedly non-partisan, including alike democrats and republicans of all shades, and cotton and wheat growers of national prominence.

While the conference of farm leaders from some 20 Mississippi valley states ostensibly is chiefly economic, there is a strong current of politics running through it, and talk of available "farmer candidates" for president has featured private discussions of delegates.

In addition to a demand for passage of a relief bill, observers believed the resolution might include a national call to farmers to "disregard party lines" in the next presidential election and vote for an avowed advocate of federal aid to farmers.

Because of the non-partisan nature of the gathering, members in a position to know insist that the resolution will not include any out-and-out endorsement of specific presidential candidates.

The same members admitted, however, that there was a strong probability that the conference proper would endorse by acclamation a candidate "in event a spontaneous movement to that general end should begin on the floor of the conference room."

Sessions of the conference opened here yesterday at the call of former Governor George W. Donaghey of Arkansas, who delivered a key-note speech featured by the assertion that federal farm relief "is a constitutional as federal aid of industry in the form of protective tariff."

Other speakers included Senators Arthur Capper, Kansas, and Arthur R. Robinson, Indiana, both of whom advocated passage of a relief bill. Robinson expressed the belief the bill "would stand the test of a supreme court decision."

St. Paul, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The State Bank of Sargeant, Mower county, closed Dec. 21, 1926, will be reopened, it was announced today by A. J. Veigel, state banking commissioner.

FEARS RAIL MERGER CONTROL WILL LEAVE STATE

E. C. LINDLEY, SON-IN-LAW OF
JAMES J. HILL, QUERIES
HEARING

LINDLEY CROSS EXAMINES PRES.
DONNELLY AT I. C. C.
SESSION

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 2.—(UP)—E. C. Lindley, son-in-law of James J. Hill, founder of the Great Northern railroad, today endeavored to learn the proposed location of control of the Great Northern Pacific railroad, the name under which the merged Northern Pacific and Great Northern systems will be known if the interstate commerce commission sanctions the unification.

The subject of control center brought many questions, but little information at today's hearing before the commission.

Lindley declared he feared that three men, whose names were not divulged, but who are said to be the organizers of the Great Northern Pacific railway company as a Delaware corporation, would have control, and that the center of activity would be in Delaware, with consequent loss of taxes to the state of Minnesota.

Most of the morning session was spent by Lindley cross examining Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific system. It was brought out that there was no special meeting of Northern Pacific stockholders to approve the leasing of the road to the proposed Great Northern Pacific, and that because the deposit committee holding 70 per cent of Northern Pacific stock failed to attend the annual stockholders' meeting, directors of the road whose terms had expired were continued in office.

Clarence Miller, Washington, D. C., counsel for the American short line railway association, asked Pres. Donnelly a few questions and then announced that after Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern, completed his testimony, he would seek to cross examine both executives.

In minimizing what was indicated to be a move toward reduction of personnel and payroll by means of the merger, President Donnelly, of the Northern Pacific railroad, late yesterday expressed an opinion that "the public press" has given an erroneous impression of the economies which testimony showed the Northerns propose to effect under the merger. The reduction in personnel and payroll, he said, "will be so slight and will be distributed over such a period of years that it will hardly be felt."

The reduction in number of employees can be accomplished, President Donnelly stated, by simply failing to fill positions as employees drop out from time to time. He introduced an exhibit showing that from 1920 to 1926, a period of much unemployment in the northwest, the Northern Pacific reduced the number of its employees from 35,533 to 26,111. This reduction, he said, was made quietly, and the northwest absorbed these men made jobless by the reduction.

Much of Mr. Donnelly's testimony was historical in nature.

Coalition Government Sought in Roumania

Vienna, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Reports from Bucharest state that M. Mainu, leader of the national peasant party, has refused an offer from Premier Bratianu to form a coalition government.

Other reports add that Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France telegraphed Bratianu, urging a peaceful settlement of the differences between the peasant party and the monarchial government.

The message is said to outline the French government's standpoint on the question of Prince Carol's return to the throne now occupied by his six-year-old son, King Michael.

FALL-SINCLAIR OIL CASE ENDS IN A MISTRIAL

CHARGES OF ALLEGED JURY TAMPERING MADE

MEANWHILE, A GRAND JURY IS INVESTIGATING CHARGES
MADE

START CASE AGAIN AS SOON
AS POSSIBLE

Washington, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy trial ended prematurely today. Justice Frederick L. Siddons announced a mistrial as a result of charges of alleged jury tampering. Meanwhile, a grand jury investigated the charges in another room of the same courthouse.

Government lawyers said they intended to start again as soon as possible—in a few weeks or months—their tremendous and costly effort to send Harry F. Sinclair, oil millionaire and sportsman, and Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, to prison on charges of conspiring to defraud the government in making the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve lease.

Owen J. Roberts, government counsel, definitely announced he would ask for a new trial for January. He notified defense counsel informally immediately after court adjourned. His original intention was to make the motion in open court today, but the judge adjourned the session before he could speak. Roberts will present his request to the judge privately later in the day.

The trial ended dramatically in its 13th day as a result of four affidavits submitted by government counsel that one juror boasted he expected to profit from an acquittal and that 15 or 16 Burns detectives were dogging the footsteps of jurors, making contacts with their friends and acquaintances, and investigating their financial standing. One affidavit charged Sinclair was the real employer of the detectives.

Justice Siddons advised Juror Edward Kidwell of the fact that two affidavits made charges involving him, which he was at liberty to examine. Then he reviewed his consideration of the government charges.

"The jury panel is discharged," Siddons said at 10:20 o'clock, after which court adjourned.

Within half an hour after the jury was discharged, Kidwell was summoned before the grand jury investigating the jury tampering efforts charged by the government. The young leather worker, after denying to reporters that he made the damaging statements attributed to him in government affidavits, went immediately to the district attorneys office, a few feet from the grand jury room. The other eleven jurors, it is understood, have been summoned to appear before the grand jury.

At the opening of court, Siddons ordered the jury brought in to hear for the first time of the sensational charges of jury tampering which had been laid before Siddons yesterday morning. Harry F. Sinclair came faintly into court and was smiling. He was followed soon by his co-defendant, Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior.

For 10 minutes Justice Siddons talked of the charges which had brought to a sudden and unforeseen end the government's attempt to convict Fall and Sinclair of conspiracy. His talk done, he dismissed the jury and another of the steps in the long chain of the oil case was temporarily ended.

Justice Siddons declared that the wide publicity given the affidavits on jury tampering furnished "additional reason" for his declaring a mistrial.

Juror Edward Kidwell, whose talk of expectation of receiving a "car as long as this block" in event of an acquittal, was one of the bases of the mistrial, did not leave the court room with the other jurors.

He was pale as he waited beside the government counsel, Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene.

Asked if he had anything to say, Kidwell replied:

"No, not at this time."

Asked by reporters if he had any conversation with Don King and J. R. Akers, who made affidavits about

WICKY HANSON GOES ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

CLAIMS HE SHOT JAMES BARRETT IN SELF DEFENSE

BARRETT SAID TO HAVE MURDERED TEN PERSONS IN ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Arthur (Wicky) Hanson today went on trial before Judge Carlton F. McNally in Ramsey county district court for the murder of James Barrett, who was shot to death here Aug. 14.

Hanson was indicted Oct. 13, shortly after he had confessed to killing Barrett in self-defense after Barrett had told him how he had murdered ten other persons in St. Paul during the past 18 months.

After an investigation which began when Hanson confessed Sept. 27 to murdering Barrett, the prosecution marshalled approximately 50 witnesses under subpoena and who were in court today.

Approximately 30 witnesses called by the defense were in court today.

The block-long car, Kidwell only answered, "I have nothing to say."

The debonair Sinclair and former Secretary Fall registered no visible emotion at the verdict. Fall said he would have a statement soon.

Smiling, the 11 other members of the jury walked out of the court room, finally discharged from their jury service.

Immediately after court adjourned Conrad J. Herzog, 56, juror and automobile sales manager, stepped up to Roberts.

"Eleven of us on the jury feel we have been placed under a serious cloud in this matter and that something ought to be done to vindicate us," Herzog said.

"We have no question about 10 out of the 12," Roberts replied. "We think you are an intelligent body and that you have seriously undertaken your responsibilities, and this jury is going to be vindicated. But some disgraceful things have happened, and we want your help in getting at the bottom of it. You are one of the most responsible men on this jury and you can be of great assistance."

"I never said a word about Sinclair or an automobile, although they (King and Akers) tried to lead me on," Kidwell told reporters.

District Attorney Peyton Gordon announced the entire jury would be called before the grand jury investigating the alleged jury-tampering efforts.

King and Akers, Kidwell said, tried to get him drunk last Saturday, when, according to the affidavits,

INSURGENTS IN LEGISLATURE 'REST ON THEIR OARS'

EXTRAORDINARY SESSION REQUESTED IN OKLAHOMA

POSSIBILITY OF A POLITICAL PROBE IS DISCOUNTED

By DON A. HIGGINS

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 2.—While insurgent legislators "rested on oars" in their move toward a requested extraordinary session of the legislature, administration friends and the capital city press today mildly "pooh-poohed" probability of a political probe.

One political writer averred: "Some few hopeful souls among those who have been demanding a special session were still insisting the movement is not dead."

"But among politicians generally there was a feeling that the two voluminous statements put forth by E. P. Hill and H. Tom Kight had given the movement its death blow."

The writer referred to the listed allegations of political confusion made public by those two legislative leaders.

Still another observer characterized the movement as "collapsed" and expressed the belief that the formal petition would be presented as a closing gesture but hinted therewith the insurgents would wave good bye to hopes. There was also continued gossip that Hill and Kight were not as harmonious as they would be expected to be.

Meanwhile, Kight has retired to his home in Claremore to "rest on oars," while cleaning up matters of his law practice and Hill was apparently doing the same thing in his stronghold in McAlester.

It remains to be seen whether the two are mustering a surprise. Governor Henry S. Johnston has not yet received from either Kight or Hill the petition asking the call, his secretary, H. E. Sullivan, said today.

Sullivan added that unless one of them takes the trouble to write the governor, it was doubtful whether Johnston will make any reply to the general statements, as he had indicated he would do.

The administration friends also claimed messages were continuing to come in from over the state assuring the governor there was no sentiment for a special session.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 2.—(UP)—One woman went to her death with the 12 members of the crew of the Japanese fishing smack Pyoei Maru, the "cannibal ship" picked up Monday morning off Cape Flattery after drifting across the Pacific ocean from the Japanese fishing banks.

This discovery was made today by quarantine officials at Port Townsend, where the craft has been in quarantine since it was towed into the sound.

The wedding was scheduled to be solemnized today.

ST. CROIX FALLS, WIS., HURLER ONCE PITCHER FOR BRAINERD

St. Croix Falls, Wis., Nov. 2.—(UP)—Roy C. Patterson was reported to have died Saturday at the Montgomery county, Pennsylvania home. The story of his death claimed he had been found ill and wandering the streets of Bridgeport, Pa., about two weeks ago, and was sent to the alms house.

Following his retirement from baseball, Patterson bought a farm near here, and is comfortably enjoying the publicity resultant to the story of his "death."

Patterson likewise denied being in Pennsylvania for several years.

APPEAL MADE FOR 10 PER CENT CORPORATION TAX

DR. C. S. DUNCAN, ECONOMIST OF RAIL EXECUTIVES, IS HEARD

APPEARS BEFORE HOUSE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE

Washington, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Possibility that a contemplated corporation tax reduction will permit reduction in railroad rates was discussed by the house ways and means committee today when Dr. C. S. Duncan, economist for the Association of Railway Executives, appeared for a 10 per cent corporation tax.

Duncan declared he could not promise reduction of freight or passenger rates but that reduction of the corporation tax from the present 13½ per cent to 10 per cent would cut $28,500,000 from the railroads' annual tax bill. This reduction in cost of operation would be considered by the interstate commerce commission in fixing any new rates, he said.

Duncan declared that railroads in 1924 paid $1.06 in taxes for every dollar declared in dividends, while other corporations paid only 54 cents in taxes for every dollar net profit.

Representatives of many important industries appealed to the committee in behalf of the democratic proposal to reduce the corporation tax to 10 per cent.

Frank G. Wisner of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, W. L. Crouse, druggist and Leaf Tobacco Association representative, and H. L. Ganby of the National Coal Association, agreed with Duncan in favor of the democratic proposal.

The only appeal so far received by the committee for retention of the present corporation tax rate came from Chester Gray, representing the American Farm Bureau Federation. He declared debt reduction should be undertaken first, and held that present tax burdens are not equally distributed on the basis of ability to pay. Gray also urged abolition of the automobile tax, saying the automobile is a farmer's necessity.

'RIGHT TO KILL' RAISED AS DEFENSE

London, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The second "right to kill" case within two weeks has come before an English court with the arraignment at Tonbridge of Mrs. Margaret B. Delvigne, 34, a war time nurse. She is charged with maliciously administering arsenic to her mother, Mrs. S. M. Walte, wife of one of the largest hop growers in Kent.

According to police Mrs. Delvigne confessed she gave the arsenic "to save my mother weeks of agony she otherwise would have suffered before dying of malignant cancer of the liver."

"I am sure I have done the right thing," she said.

The arsenic did not kill her mother, medical examiners reported.

Recently a jury acquitted a laborer who drowned his four-year-old daughter to end her suffering from pneumonia and tuberculosis. The "right to kill" had been raised as a defense.

FIGHT ON AT ST. LOUIS FOR FEDERAL FARM AID

RESOLUTIONS WITH SIGNIFICANCE OF POLITICAL PLATFORM

AWAIT ENDORSEMENT OF THE MIDDLE WEST AND SOUTHERN FARM LEADERS

By FOSTER EATON

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

St. Louis, Mo., Nov.—A resolution with the significance of a political platform awaited the endorsement here today of 300 middle west and southern leaders in the fight to obtain federal farm aid.

It embodies a demand for earliest possible passage of a bill embracing the general features of the McNary-Haugen bill sent to the White House by the last congress and vetoed by President Coolidge.

A committee of 29 presided over by Governor Adam McMullen of Nebraska, an ardent advocate of the vetoed bill, worked until after midnight whipping the resolution into shape.

Full significance of the document lies in the fact that membership of the committee is wholeheartedly non-partisan, including alike democrats and republicans of all shades, and cotton and wheat growers of national prominence.

While the conference of farm leaders from some 20 Mississippi valley states ostensibly is chiefly economic, there is a strong current of politics running through it, and talk of available "farmer candidates" for president has featured private discussions of delegates.

In addition to a demand for passage of a relief bill, observers believed the resolution might include a national call to farmers to "disregard party lines" in the next presidential election and vote for an avowed advocate of federal aid to farmers.

Because of the non-partisan nature of the gathering, members in a position to know insist that the resolution will not include any out-and-out endorsement of specific presidential candidates.

The same members admitted, however, that there was a strong probability that the conference proper would endorse by acclamation a candidate "in event a spontaneous movement to that general end should begin on the floor of the conference room."

Sessions of the conference opened here yesterday at the call of former Governor George W. Donaghey of Arkansas, who delivered a key-note speech featuring by the assertion that federal farm relief "is a constitutional as federal aid of industry in the form of protective tariff."

Other speakers included Senators Arthur Capper, Kansas, and Arthur R. Robinson, Indiana, both of whom advocated passage of a relief bill.

Robinson expressed the belief the bill "would stand the test of a supreme court decision."

St. Paul, Nov. 2.—(UP)—The State Bank of Sargeant, Mower county, closed Dec. 21, 1926, will be reopened. It was announced today by A. J. Veigel, state banking commissioner.

FEARS RAIL MERGER CONTROL WILL LEAVE STATE

E. C. LINDLEY, SON-IN-LAW OF JAMES J. HILL, QUERIES HEARING

LINDLEY CROSS EXAMINES PRES. DONNELLY AT I. C. C. SESSION

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 2.—(UP)—E. C. Lindley, son-in-law of James J. Hill, founder of the Great Northern railroad, today endeavored to learn the proposed location of control of the Great Northern Pacific railroad, the name under which the merged Northern Pacific and Great Northern systems will be known if the interstate commerce commission sanctions the unification.

The subject of control center brought many questions, but little information at today's hearing before the commission.

Lindley declared he feared that three men, whose names were not divulged, but who are said to be the organizers of the Great Northern Pacific railway company as a Delaware corporation, would have control, and that the center of activity would be in Delaware, with consequent loss of taxes to the state of Minnesota.

Most of the morning session was spent by Lindley cross examining Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific system. It was brought out that there was no special meeting of Northern Pacific stockholders to approve the leasing of the road to the proposed Great Northern Pacific, and that because the deposit committee holding 70 per cent of Northern Pacific stock failed to attend the annual stockholders' meeting, directors of the road whose terms had expired were continued in office.

Clarence Miller, Washington, D. C., counsel for the American short line railway association, asked Pres. Donnelly a few questions and then announced that after Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern, completed his testimony, he would seek to cross examine both executives.

In minimizing what was indicated to be a move toward reduction of personnel and payroll by means of the merger, President Donnelly, of the Northern Pacific railroad, late yesterday expressed an opinion that "the public press" has given an erroneous impression of the economies which testimony showed the Northerns propose to effect under the merger. The reduction in personnel and payroll, he said, "will be so slight and will be distributed over such a period of years that it will hardly be felt."

The reduction in number of employees can be accomplished, President Donnelly stated, by simply failing to fill positions as employees drop out from time to time. He introduced an exhibit showing that from 1920 to 1926, a period of much unemployment in the northwest, the Northern Pacific reduced the number of its employees from 35,533 to 26,111. This reduction, he said, was made quietly, and the northwest absorbed these men made jobless by the reduction.

Much of Mr. Donnelly's testimony was historical in nature.

Coalition Government Sought in Roumania

Vienna, Nov. 2.—(UP)—Reports from Bucharest state that M. Mainu, leader of the national peasant party, has refused an offer from Premier Bratianu to form a coalition government.

Other reports add that Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France telegraphed Bratianu, urging a peaceful settlement of the differences between the peasant party and the monarchial government.

The message is said to outline the French government's standpoint on the question of Prince Carol's return to the throne now occupied by his six-year-old son, King Michael.

CHRYSLER ADDS NEW CAR TO "52" MODEL

De Luxe Coupe With Rumble Seat
Presents Many Luxuries in its Price Class

NOW ON DISPLAY HERE

Is Distinctive in Appearance, Combines Grace, Luxury and Performance Ability

A new de luxe coupe with rumble seat has been added by the Chrysler Corporation to its "52" model, and is now on display at the Erickson Motor Co., local dealer. It is listed at $795, f. o. b. Detroit.

Roominess is an impressive feature of the new car, as of all its companions in the Chrysler "52" model. Its capacious front compartment has ample space for two and two more passengers can find easy seating accommodation in the rumble seat, where the wide removable back curtain enables them to converse readily with the other occupants of the car.

The luxurious appointments which characterize the entire range of the Chrysler "52" model are carried into the new De Luxe Coupe to the fullest extent. Gray, shark-grained leather is used for trimming the front compartment and the cushion springs are of the comfortable form-fitting saddle type. The rumble seat is trimmed in moleskin imitation leather to match the front compartment in color.

The top of the car is of two box stationary type, covered with durable leather-like fabric. Landau braces are used and are exceptionally smart in appearance.

Among the numerous other features of interest and value in the new car are the military front and cadet visor, which help the sweeping streamlines to produce an exceptionally smart ensemble; vertical ventilating windshield; automatic windshield wiper; rear view mirror; narrow corner pillars; Butler finish interior hardware; door pocket; molded runner draft plates around pedal and hand control; bullet type headlights; long springs; balloon tires; air cleaner, and Febco anti-theft numbering plates.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

By EDNA PURDY WALSH
Editor, Character Reading Magazine.

Is He Sentimental?

Reseworth

Here is a valuable key to know the man or woman in whom you are interested: Check over his writing and look for high l dots and high letters like the t or d. Then watch the terminals. If you find that these turn back toward the left you will know with these two keys combined that the writer thinks fondly of the past. He reverts things that mean love and will cherish old letters, cards, or gifts of sentiment.

This type of writer will hold the thought of a birthday or wedding anniversary in mind and will celebrate with much ceremony.

Gracefully formed flying t bars coupled with the above stroke—the back-curling terminal—show a type who would be pronounced in a sentimental way and would be deeply touched by music, nature, especially moonlight poetry. Generally this type writes a disorderly looking page.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied. (Copyright)

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustrous and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

It's three weeks since the Daughters of the Soil started their play, "A Case of Suspicion." How time flies!

It was a grand success and, despite the stormy afternoon, which made the roads very bad, it was appreciated by an audience of at least two hundred people.

Every one of the actors did so well that it is hard to pick the stars. All we have heard has been praise for everyone. Here's hoping they will put on another play some time soon.

The proceeds of the play plus a gift of twenty dollars from the Daughters of the Soil are being used as an initial payment on a Packard piano for the District No. 3 school.

The D. O. T. S. are to be complimented on their ability to carry through the things they plan. We are reminded of several worthwhile things they have accomplished since their organization two years ago.

It's too bad, if you missed seeing the play, for really the specialties alone were worth the admission price.

The Gypsy chorus was very pretty indeed and the Hayshakers' orchestra—well, cheer up, maybe you will get a chance to hear them again.

The Daughters of the Soil wish to express their appreciation, through this column, to all who helped in one way or another to make their play a success. R. B. Thompson's loaned their piano, and Ralph Reid moved it there and back. Harry Hughes put in the stage with lumber loaned for the occasion by Richard Kyllingstad. The Long Lake town board kindly granted the use of the town hall. The coffee was donated by R. Wicklund, a Brainerd grocer. Nearly every person in the neighborhood did something in the way of donating properties, food, or labor and to all these and others who helped in any way, the D. O. T. S. express their thanks.

The school children enjoyed a Halloween party given them by their teacher, Miss Kleven, last Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Gust Juline are enjoying many fine programs and services over their new radio.

District No. 15 had a pie social Friday night which was well attended. The school children also presented a program.

We heard that the pies spoke well for the cooks in that district.

The Misses Maude Thompson and Margaret Dillan attended the Halloween party of the Senior class of the Brainerd high school Saturday night.

Someone lost a fur neck-piece the night of the play. The owner may get it by calling at R. B. Thompson's.

The D. O. T. S. will meet next Saturday. Important business will be discussed so every member is urged to be present.

HEDDA HOYT TELLS OF NEW FETISHES

By HEDDA HOYT

Paris (RE)—One can't come to Paris without purchasing some of the latest Fashion fetishes which are brought out to amuse the feminine world from season to season. Right now, the penguin, that queer looking Arctic bird which seems to be wearing a man's dress-suit, holds the center of the stage. Made of black and white velvet and turned into pocketbooks, they are carried by many fashionable. Almost everyone purchases a Penguin fetish since it is the latest good luck token in Paris.

Quite as amusing as the Penguin, is the little monkey-shaped vanity case. Tiny monkeys of furry material in the gayest of colors are made so that the heads can be taken off. The body opens displaying tiny pads of rouge, powder and a tiny lipstick. When the vanity is closed, one has a little monkey on a ribbon cord.

The vendors around the cafe de la Paix have sold thousands of good luck monkeys of another variety to American tourists. Monkeys of the size of Marmosets have springs in their tails which can be manipulated to make them move their heads, wiggle their ears, chatter and blink their eyes. It's amusing to see motherly-looking American women carrying them about with them.

The puppy handbags made of fur-like material which have been popular with youngsters in America are so realistic in Paris as to be almost alive. Here, they are made of real fur and one can't tell whether women are carrying real dogs or dog purses in many cases. In fact, many Parisians walk about the smart shopping districts with tiny breeds of French and Belgium dogs in their arms.

Another proof of the Parisian's preference for imitation dogs over other fetishes, is the wearing of tiny chenille dogs upon their sports hats. Tiny airdales and wire-haired terriers of chenille with pin buckles are quite the thing in millinery accessories.

A Birthday Party

A group of 32 friends gathered at the home of R. E. Houge's Sunday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Houge's birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Houge were entertained at dinner at their son's place when she received a telephone call that she had company at home and to return at once.

When entering the door she was surprised to see the room filled with friends seated so quietly. She then turned about to greet them all and she discovered a large birthday cake with 53 candles placed on the table before her.

She was also presented with a percolator for a gift.

A delicious lunch was served and all spent a very enjoyable afternoon.

The school children enjoyed a Hallowe'en party given them by their teacher, Miss Kleven, last Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Gust Juline are enjoying many fine programs and services over their new radio.

District No. 15 had a pie social Friday night which was well attended. The school children also presented a program.

We heard that the pies spoke well for the cooks in that district.

The Misses Maude Thompson and Margaret Dillan attended the Hallowe'en party of the Senior class of the Brainerd high school Saturday night.

Someone lost a fur neck-piece the night of the play. The owner may get it by calling at R. B. Thompson's.

The D. O. T. S. will meet next Saturday. Important business will be discussed so every member is urged to be present.

HEDDA HOYT TELLS OF NEW FETISHES

By HEDDA HOYT

Paris (U.P.)—One can't come to Paris without purchasing some of the latest Fashion fetishes which are brought out to amuse the feminine world from season to season. Right now, the penguin, that queer looking Arctic bird which seems to be wearing a man's dress-suit, holds the center of the stage. Made of black and white velvet and turned into pocketbooks, they are carried by many fashionable. Almost everyone purchases a Penguin fetish since it is the latest good luck token in Paris.

Quite as amusing as the Penguin, is the little monkey-shaped vanity case. Tiny monkeys of furry material in the gayest of colors are made so that the heads can be taken off. The body opens displaying tiny pads of rouge, powder and a tiny lipstick. When the vanity is closed, one has a little monkey on a ribbon cord.

The vendors around the cafe de la Paix have sold thousands of good luck monkeys of another variety to American tourists. Monkeys of the size of Marmosets have springs in their tails which can be manipulated to make them move their heads, wiggle their ears, chatter and blink their eyes. It's amusing to see motherly-looking American women carrying them about with them.

The puppy handbags made of fur-like material which have been popular with youngsters in America are so realistic in Paris as to be almost alive. Here, they are made of real fur and one can't tell whether women are carrying real dogs or dog purses in many cases. In fact, many Parisians walk about the smart shopping districts with tiny breeds of French and Belgium dogs in their arms.

Another proof of the Parisian's preference for imitation dogs over other fetishes, is the wearing of tiny chenille dogs upon their sports hats. Tiny airedales and wire-haired terriers or chenille with pin buckles are quite the thing in millinery accessories.

A Birthday Party

A group of 32 friends gathered at the home of R. E. Houge's Sunday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Houge's birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Houge were entertained at dinner at their son's place when she received a telephone call that she had company at home and to return at once.

When entering the door she was surprised to see the room filled with friends seated so quietly. She then turned about to greet them all and she discovered a large birthday cake with 53 candles placed on the table before her.

She was also presented with a percolator for a gift.

A delicious lunch was served and all spent a very enjoyable afternoon.

AMERICA HAS A HEART AND SOUL

LAST Friday evening Rotarians of Minneapolis and St. Paul, and a number of members from Cloquet, Brainerd, Duluth, Fargo and other points in the ninth district met at the New Nicollet Hotel in the Mill City and heard prominent Rotary heads tell of the immensity of the 1928 international convention to be held in Minneapolis next June.

All dwelt on the necessity of working daily to make it a success and this included committee men and individual members as well as the Rotary Anns.

Said one speaker: "The convention will be a great one for it will give the members of Rotary across the sea the opportunity to brush elbows with their American brothers."

Another told of the changes occurring in the Rotary program and traced developments from the early days when there were only a dozen clubs. Ray Havens mentioned the fact that the first international convention was held at Duluth.

Not one speaker brought out the fact that some fourteen languages will be spoken at the coming gathering, nor the need of having proper interpreters.

We think the greatest thing Minneapolis can do is to stress the fact in word and story and pageant that America has a heart and soul, that there is more to America than factories and mills, bank balances, railways, crops and other material things.

America has as fine aspirations, ideals and sensibilities as Europe. The American heart is stirred by humanitarian motives. Under the apparently thick and hard skin of American business is pulsating the warmest friendship.

A program based on the heart and soul idea will do much to impress Europeans and obviate the idea that all America is money mad, that it has little or no time for the finer things of life.

Treat Europe when she comes with the highest consideration. We are reminded of a vaudeville act at our Park theatre, when a man took up current philosophy and uttered a most wonderful truth in a most homely way when he said: "Don't be hard on Europe these days. If there had been no Europe in the old days, there would be no United States now."

Let's add to our welcoming committees and information bureaus men and women with a knowledge of the languages of Europe. Minneapolis club should have a large list who know Norwegian, Danish and Swedish. St. Paul has many scholars who speak French and German.

With Minneapolis so close to the University why not go over your list of classifications and see how many professors linguistically gifted are eligible to become Rotarians, or if not eligible, get them in as assistants to make welcome one of the greatest conventions Minneapolis and this section of the Northwest has ever housed.

Don't think this is a trivial matter. The Brainerd delegate to Ostend had difficulty finding an English speaking Rotarian and when he finally located his hotel it was a new resort built some seven miles out of town.

The American Bar Association, after its London meeting, visited Paris. As told by the late Judge Stanton of Bemidji, who attended: "Imagine the thrill that gripped the French welcoming committee when an American lawyer replied to the French greetings in the purest French."

HE HAD IN MIND MINNESOTA

WHEN Ralph Waldo Emerson penned his lines on October weather, he must have had in mind the kind we get in Minnesota and of which this year's sample was a fair indication. Emerson says:

"There are days which occur in this climate, at almost any season of the year, wherein the world reaches its perfection, when the air, the heavenly bodies, and the earth make a harmony as if nature would indulge her offspring.

"These halcyons may be looked for with a little more assurance in that pure October weather, which we distinguish by the name of Indian Summer. The day, immeasurably long, sleeps over the broad hills and warm wide fields.

"The tempered light of the woods is like a perpetual morning, and is stimulating and heroic. The stems of pines, hemlocks, and caks almost gleam like iron on the excited eye. The incommunicable trees begin to persuade us to live with them, and quit our life of solemn trifles. Here no history, or church, or state, is interpolated on the divine sky and the immortal year."

SEEKING JAIL ROOM

FEDERAL officials are facing a problem to find jail room for Minnesotans whom they hope to convict soon as liquor law offenders. A survey of county jails in Minnesota indicates that a majority of them are already overcrowded. Unless conditions change, many jails where the government sends prisoners will be unable to accept them. Federal court opened at St. Paul this month with 150 liquor cases scheduled.

As a rule St. Paul federal court distributes its prisoners among southern Minnesota county jails, and Duluth among the northern counties. At Brainerd the county jail has a little room, but it will be required to take care first of the results, if any, of the present term of the district court.

GIRLS who accept rides in automobiles with men they know have liquor in their possession are conspiring to violate the dry law and are as subject to arrest and imprisonment as the men, according to the ruling of Federal District Attorney J. C. Kinsler of Omaha. The ruling has been given wide publicity in college, school and university circles because of the many complaints made by parents regarding wild joy rides.

THERE are heroes in golf as well as in football. We read about the football player who went on with his game in spite of cracked vertebrae in his back. Now comes John Fink of Iowa City, Iowa, and plays a whole game of golf with a broken finger.

MORE than 1,000 boys and girls will take part in the 1927 Junior Livestock show at South St. Paul November 7 to 10. Baby beeves, hogs, sheep and poultry are to be exhibited.

A CONCRETE road between St. Paul and Eau Claire, Wis., is planned to be built within the next two years.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

Marc Antony

MARC ANTONY—hero and buffoon; true lover and faithless husband; great general and greater mountebank; orator, statesman, voluptuary and trifle—threw away the world for love. He was the hero of the most stirring real-life romance in history. He might have been a second Julius Caesar or even Alexander. He preferred to be the helpless adorer of the Egyptian queen, Cleopatra.

As a mere lad, Antony served with distinction in Rome's Syrian and Egyptian wars, and later in Gaul under Caesar, whose lifelong friend he became. When Pompey made the senate order Caesar to disarm, Antony, as tribune of the people, vetoed the bill and then fled to Caesar's camp disguised as a slave, pretending his life was in danger for his loyalty. He fought valiantly in the Gallic wars and deserves much credit for Rome's victories. As reward, when Caesar became dictator, Antony was made second in command and appointed governor of all Italy.

In his latter capacity he launched on a course of wild dissipation that set Rome aghast. The orator Cicero thundered invectives against him, and he was regarded as a hopeless failure in life. Yet at the call to arms he was at once in the field, aiding Caesar against Pompey and winning battle after battle. His soldiers worshiped him. He joked with them around the camp-fire, got royally drunk with them—was, in fact, their boon companion.

When Caesar was assassinated the conspirators had planned to rule Rome and had persuaded the people to justify their murderous act. But Antony, by a fiery and brilliant oration over Caesar's body, so aroused the popular mind against them that the murderers were compelled to flee for their lives. Then, summoning Caesar's nephew and adopted son, Octavius, Antony raised an army and marched to punish the chief conspirators, Brutus and Cassius. In two successive battles, while Octavius lay idly in his tent, Antony completely crushed the conspirators and avenged his friend's murder. He, incidentally, made himself virtual ruler of the earth, with Octavius as his colleague.

The two divided the world between them, Antony choosing the eastern half and leaving Octavius the western.

Cleopatra, queen of Egypt, was suspected of having sided with the conspirators. Antony resolved to bring her to trial for treason, as Egypt was practically subject to Rome.

Cleopatra was one of the rare women who have arisen at various periods in history to overthrow empires, leave behind them a world full of trouble and disaster and to wreck the careers of the greatest men. As a girl she had met Caesar, won his love and induced him to renounce her on the throne of Egypt, whence a family quarrel had forced her. She had even, for love of Caesar, poisoned her husband, Ptolemy.

She now tried similar tactics on Antony. At first sight of her beauty the man who had come thither as her judge became her slave. For her sake he cast away dreams of empire and let his glorious deeds of the past sink out of memory. In Alexandria the two set up a monarchy of luxury, dissipation and extravagance that became the scandal of the civilized world.

For reasons of state, Antony had married Octavia, the sister of his colleague, Octavius. She was his fourth wife. He now divorced her for Cleopatra, thus mortally offending Octavius. The latter had been busy making the most of Antony's mad infatuation to forward his own career. Cold, crafty, heartless, he had steadily undermined Antony's influence at Rome and had so strengthened himself there that a few years later he was able to declare himself emperor, under the title of Augustus. Antony had put an end to republican Rome by defeating the conspirators. Octavius reaped the fruits of his former friend's labors.

Octavius decided to get rid of Antony forever. To this end he made war on Cleopatra. Antony espoused her cause, and the two rival powers met in a great sea fight near Actium. Here Antony's genius again flashed up. He was rapidly winning the battle, when, from sudden caprice, Cleopatra ordered her galley rowed away from the scene. Antony, thinking her wounded, forgot all about the battle and followed her. Deprived thus of its leader, his whole fleet fled. For a while in subsequent warfare he held his own against Octavius. But the sun of his success was set. Cleopatra sent secret messages of submission to Octavius, who replied by telling her that the murder of Antony would be the most acceptable proof of her surrender. She accordingly had word sent to Antony that she was dead.

Broken-hearted, the lover did not wait to verify the tale, but fell upon his sword, dying for the false woman whose lures had made him throw away a world. Cleopatra, finding that the cold Octavius' heart could not be won as Caesar's and Antony's had been, and learning that she was to go to Rome as a prisoner, forced a poisonous snake to bite her and died.

Marc Antony killed himself in 30 B. C. at the age of fifty-three, having in that time run the gamut of every human experience and achievement.

After His Own Heart

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

WHEN Adam Laird discovered he had been cut to the heart by the perfidy of Minerva Jones he decided to become a confirmed bachelor. Adam was wealthy enough to play the part and romantic enough to embellish the role with those touches and graces which fiction gives it.

At forty Adam Laird was known as a woman hater. He was known also as a handsome man who owned a large home in which he lived a life of ease. The few men who had been invited to join him at cards or discussion reported his library was as comfortable and handy a place as a man could wish. In Tannerville there were many who, in the stress of domestic affairs, yearned more than once for a retreat like that of Adam Laird. It was rumored by these men that Adam was riotously happy.

Adam tried to take comfort in his sadness. He was fond of imagining that Minerva Jones would look upon the wreck she had made of his life and shed bitter tears. "I am accountable to no one but myself," he mused, "and therefore I am happier than any man in Tannerville." But for all of that, the hours were slow in passing.

The bachelor took to chess as a companion to his loneliness. With a rule book, he studied the moves and on a board before him conducted games with an imaginary opponent. Then he subscribed to a chess magazine and in time considered he was an expert. There was no one in Tannerville with whom he could play.

An idea came to Adam after reading a chess problem in his magazine. It was signed C. Y. Riddle, Minnowville, a name he had seen attached to many another communication on the subject. Adam wrote Riddle proposing that they carry on a game by mail. He even offered a silver cup for the winner.

Before the month was out the game was on, and it was a game to thrill the soul of the ardent chess fan. Adam had a whole day in which to decide his move. Then he mailed a postal card to Riddle carrying the decision and waited until he received the card which revealed the manner in which his play was countered.

Riddle was a good chess player. Adam consulted his books, studied hours over his board, and played as if his life and reputation were at stake. It took six months to play that game and Riddle won. Exhausted Adam went for a vacation in the woods. He would return and have his revenge.

Adam sat before his chess board undecided as to the opening gambit. "At last I have put Minerva and women out of my mind. I will live for a higher purpose. I will give my life to chess!" Before he went to bed he mailed his card to Riddle and the second great game was on its way.

The bachelor was enough of the chess player to realize that C. Y. Riddle was a player after his own heart. As the game progressed there came the desire to meet the man, to play with him over a common table. So Adam wrote, including the words: "You are a player after my own heart." And Riddle accepted on condition the other would make the trip.

"I find," wrote Riddle, "I will not be able to leave Minnowville. Let me know when you expect to come."

The adventure started off in a disconcerting way. When Adam rang the bell at the Minnowville address he was welcomed by a calm-eyed woman of thirty.

"I am looking for C. Y. Riddle, a gentleman with whom I was playing a game of chess."

The woman smiled. "I am Carolyn Y. Riddle," she answered, "and you are Adam Laird? You cannot imagine how I have enjoyed our game!" Adam gasped. His chess route to happiness was blocked by a woman! He should have guessed it, he told himself. They were everywhere. But this woman who smiled with so much of understanding could play the game as well, if not better than he. She was—and this was his consolation—an extraordinary woman.

"I thought you were a man," he apologized, "and yet I might have known by the—er—delicate way you handled your rooks." He blushed and told himself he was talking like an idiot.

"Suppose," said C. Y. Riddle, "we start on that game."

Adam, at the chess table, looked at the waving brown hair brought almost into his face as the girl leaned over the board. He could not fix his mind on knights, bishops, pawns and the rest. It seemed to him somehow that this was what he had been wanting for a long time, a girl to sit opposite him at a table, at chess, breakfast—any kind of table.

Every evening for a week he called to continue the game and all the while he knew he was beaten.

"It is all up," he said when she checkedmate him. He looked at her and thought he read his future in the gaze she returned.

"I think"—and he heard himself speaking as if from a distance—"I think that if you were to marry me and come to Tannerville we could have some fine games of chess."

The girl laughed. "All right, partner," she said, "you know you said I was a player after your own heart."

YANKEE PUZZLED

An American staying at a Scottish shooting lodge was awakened early in the morning by an ear-piercing noise under the bedroom window.

"Lut's Mike," he said to the man who brought in the morning tea, "what's that?"

"That's Donald playing the bagpipes, sir," came the reply.

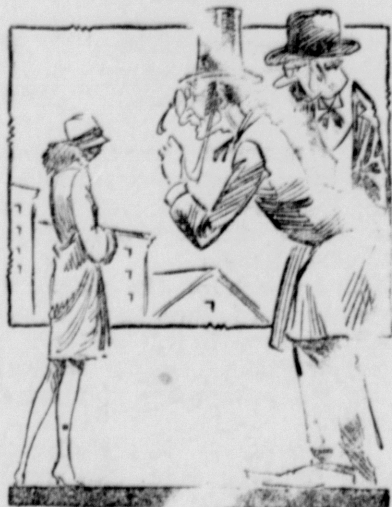

"Gee," muttered the American, "I thought it was some one tearing a baggis!"—TIL-BIS.

Save the Pieces

"Oh, that isn't her real name," was the reply; "we call her 'Daisy' because she's always breaking!"—Congregationalist.

Let's add to our welcoming committees and information bureaus men and women with a knowledge of the languages of Europe. Minneapolis club should have a large list who know Norwegian, Danish and Swedish. St. Paul has many scholars who speak French and German.

With Minneapolis so close to the University why not go over your list of classifications and see how many professors linguistically gifted are eligible to become Rotarians, or if not eligible, get them in as assistants to make welcome one of the greatest conventions Minneapolis and this section of the Northwest has ever housed.

Don't think this is a trivial matter. The Brainerd delegate to Ostend had difficulty finding an English speaking Rotarian and when he finally located his hotel it was a new resort built some seven miles out of town.

The American Bar Association, after its London meeting, visited Paris. As told by the late Judge Stanton of Bemidji, who attended: "Imagine the thrill that gripped the French welcoming committee when an American lawyer replied to the French greetings in the purest French."

HE HAD IN MIND MINNESOTA

WHEN Ralph Waldo Emerson penned his lines on October weather, he must have had in mind the kind we get in Minnesota and of which this year's sample was a fair indication. Emerson says:

"There are days which occur in this climate, at almost any season of the year, wherein the world reaches its perfection, when the air, the heavenly bodies, and the earth make a harmony as if nature would indulge her offspring.

"These halcyons may be looked for with a little more assurance in that pure October weather, which we distinguish by the name of Indian Summer. The day, immeasurably long, sleeps over the broad hills and warm wide fields.

"The tempered light of the woods is like a perpetual morning, and is stimulating and heroic. The stems of pines, hemlocks, and caks almost gleam like iron on the excited eye. The incommunicable trees begin to persuade us to live with them, and quit our life of solemn trifles. Here no history, or church, or state, is interpolated on the divine sky and the immortal year."

SEEKING JAIL ROOM

FEDERAL officials are facing a problem to find jail room for Minnesotans whom they hope to convict soon as liquor law offenders. A survey of county jails in Minnesota indicates that a majority of them are already overcrowded. Unless conditions change, many jails where the government sends prisoners will be unable to accept them. Federal court opened at St. Paul this month with 150 liquor cases scheduled.

As a rule St. Paul federal court distributes its prisoners among southern Minnesota county jails, and Duluth among the northern counties. At Brainerd the county jail has a little room, but it will be required to take care first of the results, if any, of the present term of the district court.

GIRLS who accept rides in automobiles with men they know have liquor in their possession are conspiring to violate the dry law and are as subject to arrest and imprisonment as the men, according to the ruling of Federal District Attorney J. C. Kinsler of Omaha. The ruling has been given wide publicity in college, school and university circles because of the many complaints made by parents regarding wild joy rides.

THERE are heroes in golf as well as in football. We read about the football player who went on with his game in spite of cracked vertebrae in his back. Now comes John Fink of Iowa City, Iowa, and plays a whole game of golf with a broken finger.

MORE than 1,000 boys and girls will take part in the 1927 Junior Livestock show at South St. Paul November 7 to 10. Baby beebes, hogs, sheep and poultry are to be exhibited.

A CONCRETE road between St. Paul and Eau Claire, Wis., is planned to be built within the next two years.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(By Dodd, Mead & Company)

Marc Antony

MARC ANTONY—hero and buffoon; true lover and faithless husband; great general and greater mountebank; orator, statesman, voluptuary and trifle—threw away the world for love. He was the hero of the most stirring real-life romance in history. He might have been a second Julius Caesar or even Alexander. He preferred to be the helpless adorer of the Egyptian queen, Cleopatra.

As a mere lad, Antony served with distinction in Rome's Syrian and Egyptian wars, and later in Gaul under Caesar, whose lifelong friend he became. When Pompey made the senate order Caesar to disarm, Antony, as tribune of the people, vetoed the bill and then fled to Caesar's camp disguised as a slave, pretending his life was in danger for his loyalty. He fought valiantly in the Gallic wars and deserves much credit for Rome's victories. As reward, when Caesar became dictator, Antony was made second in command and appointed governor of all Italy.

In his latter capacity he launched on a course of wild dissipation that set Rome aghast. The orator Cicero thundered invectives against him, and he was regarded as a hopeless failure in life. Yet at the call to arms he was at once in the field, aiding Caesar against Pompey and winning battle after battle. His soldiers worshiped him. He joked with them around the camp-fire, got royally drunk with them—was, in fact, their boon companion.

When Caesar was assassinated the conspirators had planned to rule Rome and had persuaded the people to justify their murderous act. But Antony, by a fiery and brilliant oration over Caesar's body, so aroused the popular mind against them that the murderers were compelled to flee for their lives. Then, summoning Caesar's nephew and adopted son, Octavius, Antony raised an army and marched to punish the chief conspirators, Brutus and Cassius. In two successive battles, while Octavius lay idly in his tent, Antony completely crushed the conspirators and avenged his friend's murder. He, incidentally, made himself virtual ruler of the earth, with Octavius as his colleague.

The two divided the world between them, Antony choosing the eastern half and leaving Octavius the western.

Cleopatra, queen of Egypt, was suspected of having sided with the conspirators. Antony resolved to bring her to trial for treason, as Egypt was practically subject to Rome.

Cleopatra was one of the rare women who have arisen at various periods in history to overthrow empires, leave behind them a world full of trouble and disaster and to wreck the careers of the greatest men. As a girl she had met Caesar, won his love and induced him to renounce his throne of Egypt, whence a family quarrel had forced her. She had even, for love of Caesar, poisoned her husband, Ptolemy.

She now tried similar tactics on Antony. At first sight of her beauty the man who had come thither as her judge became her slave. For her sake he cast away dreams of empire and let his glorious deeds of the past sink out of memory. In Alexandria the two set up a monarchy of luxury, dissipation and extravagance that became the scandal of the civilized world.

For reasons of state, Antony had married Octavia, the sister of his colleague, Octavius. She was his fourth wife. He now divorced her for Cleopatra, thus mortally offending Octavius. The latter had been busy making the most of Antony's mad infatuation to forward his own career. Cold, crafty, heartless, he had steadily undermined Antony's influence at Rome and had so strengthened himself there that a few years later he was able to declare himself emperor, under the title of Augustus. Antony had put an end to republican Rome by defeating the conspirators. Octavius reaped the fruits of his former friend's labors.

Octavius decided to get rid of Antony forever. To this end he made war on Cleopatra. Antony espoused her cause, and the two rival powers met in a great sea fight near Actium. Here Antony's genius again flashed up. He was rapidly winning the battle, when, from sudden caprice, Cleopatra ordered her galley rowed away from the scene. Antony, thinking her wounded, forgot all about the battle and followed her. Deprived thus of its leader, his whole fleet fled. For a while in subsequent warfare he held his own against Octavius. But the sun of his success was set. Cleopatra sent secret messages of submission to Octavius, who replied by telling her that the murder of Antony would be the most acceptable proof of her surrender. She accordingly had word sent to Antony that she was dead.

Broken-hearted, the lover did not wait to verify the tale, but fell upon his sword, dying for the false woman whose lures had made him throw away a world. Cleopatra, finding that the cold Octavius' heart could not be won as Caesar's and Antony's had been, and learning that she was to go to Rome as a prisoner, forced a poisonous snake to bite her and died.

Marc Antony killed himself in 30 B. C. at the age of fifty-three, having in that time run the gamut of every human experience and achievement.

After His Own Heart

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

WHEN Adam Laird discovered he had been cut to the heart by the peridy of Minerva Jones he decided to become a confirmed bachelor. Adam was wealthy enough to play the part and romantic enough to embellish the role with those touches and graces which fiction gives it.

At forty Adam Laird was known as a woman later. He was known also as a handsome man who owned a large home in which he lived a life of ease. The few men who had been invited to join him at cards or discussion reported his library was as comfortable and handy a place as a man could wish. In Tannerville there were many who, in the stress of domestic affairs, yearned more than once for a retreat like that of Adam Laird. It was assumed by these men that Adam was riotously happy.

Adam tried to take comfort in his sadness. He was fond of imagining that Minerva Jones would look upon the wreck she had made of his life and shed bitter tears. "I am accountable to no one but myself," he mused, "and therefore I am happier than any man in Tannerville." But for all of that, the hours were slow in passing.

The bachelor took to chess as a companion to his loneliness. With a rule book, he studied the moves and on a board before him conducted games with an imaginary opponent. Then he subscribed to a chess magazine and in time considered he was an expert. There was no one in Tannerville with whom he could play.

An idea came to Adam after reading a chess problem in his magazine. It was signed C. Y. Riddle, Minnowville, a name he had seen attached to many another communication on the subject. Adam wrote Riddle proposing that they carry on a game by mail. He even offered a silver cup for the winner.

Before the month was out the game was on, and it was a game to thrill the soul of the ardent chess fan. Adam had a whole day in which to decide his move. Then he mailed a postal card to Riddle carrying the decision and waited until he received the card which revealed the manner in which his play was countered.

Riddle was a good chess player. Adam consulted his books, studied hours over his board, and played as if his life and reputation were at stake. It took six months to play that game and Riddle won. Exhausted Adam went for a vacation in the woods. He would return and have his revenge.

Adam sat before his chess board undecided as to the opening gambit. "At last I have put Minerva and women out of my mind. I will live for a higher purpose. I will give my life to chess!" Before he went to bed he mailed his card to Riddle and the second great game was on its way.

The bachelor was enough of the chess player to realize that C. Y. Riddle was a player after his own heart. As the game progressed there came the desire to meet the man, to play with him over a common table. So Adam wrote, including the words: "You are a player after my own heart." And Riddle accepted on condition the other would make the trip.

"I find," wrote Riddle, "I will not be able to leave Minnowville. Let me know when you expect to come."

The adventure started off in a disconcerting way. When Adam rang the bell at the Minnowville address he was welcomed by a calm-eyed woman of thirty.

"I am looking for C. Y. Riddle, a gentleman with whom I was playing a game of chess."

The woman smiled. "I am Carolyn Y. Riddle," she answered, "and you are Adam Laird? You cannot imagine how I have enjoyed our game!" Adam gasped. His chess route to happiness was blocked by a woman! He should have guessed it, he told himself. They were everywhere. But this woman who smiled with so much of understanding could play the game as well, if not better than he. She was—and this was his consolation—an extraordinary woman.

"I thought you were a man," he apologized, "and yet I might have known by the—er—delicate way you handled your rooks." He blushed and told himself he was talking like an idiot.

"Suppose," said C. Y. Riddle, "we start on that game."

Adam, at the chess table, looked at the waving brown hair brought almost into his face as the girl leaned over the board. He could not fix his mind on knights, bishops, pawns and the rest. It seemed to him somehow that this was what he had been wanting for a long time, a girl to sit opposite him at a table, at chess, breakfast—any kind of table.

Every evening for a week he called to continue the game and all the while he knew he was beaten.

"It is all up," he said when she checkmated him. He looked at her and thought he read his future in the gaze she returned.

"I think"—and he heard himself speaking as if from a distance—"I think that if you were to marry me and come to Tannerville we could have some fine games of chess."

The girl laughed. "All right, partner," she said, "you know you said I was a player after your own heart."

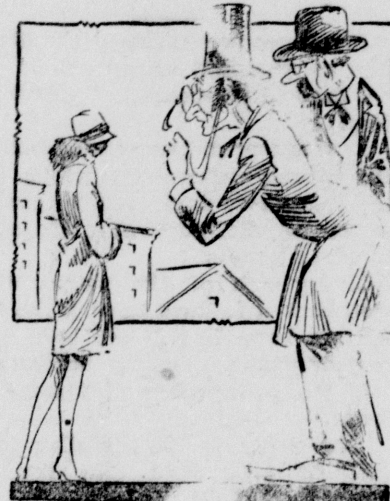

YANKEE PUZZLED

An American staying at a Scottish shooting lodge was awakened early in the morning by an ear-piercing noise under the bedroom window. "Luv'a Mike," he said to the man who brought in the morning tea. "What's that?" "That's Donald playing the bagpipes, sir," came the reply. "Gee," muttered the American, "I thought it was some one featuring a baggists!"—Tit-Bits.

MICKEY WALKER HAS HIGH HOPES OF GAINING THIRD TITLE

HAS EASY VICTORY OVER

MIKE McTIGUE

BEAT HIM TO THE FLOOR IN THE FIRST ROUND LAST NIGHT

USED SERIES OF RIGHTS AND LEFTS TO BODY, AND RIGHT TO JAW

By BERTY M. DENBY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Mickey Walker, who has possessed both the welterweight and middleweight world's boxing championships, today held high hopes of gaining a third title—the light heavyweight.

Mickey's opinion followed an easy victory which he scored over the venerable Mike McTigue here last night.

Walker beat McTigue to the floor in the first round, using a series of rights and lefts to the body and a crashing right to the jaw.

Before McTigue was counted out he showed one of the gamiest streaks ever exhibited in the prize ring. Victim of what might termed a lucky punch, a right to the jaw, Mickey landed as the round opened, McTigue was groggy from the start.

Walker followed his right to the jaw with several lefts to the head which finally sent Mike to the floor for the count of nine.

His eyes glazed, McTigue came up and gamely tried to stave off Walker's blows. However, he went down again for the count of eight.

As the referee started nine, McTigue grabbed a rope, pulled himself to a standing posture, turned toward Mickey with a sickly sort of smile and stood with his arms down. The expression on his face seemed to say:

"I'm whipped but they won't count Mike McTigue out until he's unconscious."

The last time McTigue got up he didn't have a chance in the world to stand but the Irish nerve wouldn't allow him to stay down.

As a result of the victory, Walker invades the light heavyweight class and has announced he is after Jimmy Slattery, chief claimant to the title.

Walker previously has held the welterweight, and is the present holder of the middleweight championship.

'SPIDER' KELLY LOSES OUT IN LAST FIGHT

LONG-ARMED LITTLE IRISHMAN ONCE FACED GANS FOR 25 ROUNDS

"SPIDER" WANTED TO DIE IN 'FRISCO. SCENE OF EARLY TRIUMPHS

By RICHARD BALDWIN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

San Francisco, Nov. 2.—"Spider" Kelly, the wiry, long-armed little Irishman who stood up against the mighty attack of Joe Gans for twenty-five slashing rounds, was cheated by fate out of the chance to fight his last battle in the city where he rose to fame.

"Spider" died yesterday—in a hospital at Rochester, Minn., far from home. He will be brought back to San Francisco for burial beside the bodies of his father and mother.

But "Spider," whose real name was James Patrick Curtin, wanted to die here, near the scene of his early triumphs and defeats and among the friends who had known him at the height of his ring career.

Before leaving San Francisco for Rochester to undergo a mastoid operation, he told his friends he would rather "hear the final gong here than in any other spot in the world."

The old timers today were reminiscing about the fiery little Irishman whose vituperous tongue was nearly as deadly as his flashing fists.

Those of them who had been at the ringside in New York when Kelly stayed upright against Joe Gans through the 25 terrible rounds, said he managed to do so only because he had Gans "guessing what it was all about."

ACE HUDKINS HAS HEART SET ON BEATING DUNDEE

parently beaten man on to greater efforts and victory.

"Spider learned to fight in the streets and continued to fight because he loved to."

Tim McGrath, San Francisco boxing promoter and perhaps the closest friend of Kelly, told of the early struggles of his pal to gain entrance into the fighting ranks.

"He was a great lad and how he loved to fight," said McGrath. "Kelly and I were boys together. We played together and we fought together."

"He had to fight in the old saloons and resorts of the Barbary Coast to gain recognition and in those days to come out of a fight unmaimed, one had to fight and to be clever."

"It was there he developed his fighting ability, and learned to use his head as well as his fists."

Kelly retired from the ring 25 years ago and became a trainer with McGrath for his partner. Together they groomed and seconded such men as Young Corbett, Jimmy Britt, Abe Attell, Joe Thomas, "Sailor Jack" Sharkey and the burly Jim Jeffries.

E. S. BARNARD ELECTED PRESIDENT AMERICAN LEAGUE

By CLARK B. KELSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Nov. 2.—E. S. Barnard, president of the Cleveland Indians, today was elected president of the American League, succeeding Byron Bancroft Johnson.

Directors of the league met here in special session to elect Barnard. William Harridge, for years secretary to Johnson, was elected secretary of the league.

Today's session of the league presidents was in marked contrast to most of their meetings in recent years, which have been characterized by bitter disputes between Johnson and other officials. Today it was evident that the utmost harmony existed. Proceedings were carried out with great formality.

The election session was executive and lasted for more than two hours. After it was over, Harridge announced the elections to waiting newspapermen. He said salary figures would not be announced. It had been widely reported that Barnard was to receive $40,000 a year.

SPORTSMATTER BY FRANK GETTY UNITED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

Three million dollars worth of thoroughbred horseflesh, groomed to glossy perfection and with a ribbon in its tail, will strut across the tanbark of Madison Square Garden next week in the annual, ever-fascinating spectacle of the National Horse Show.

Customs and fashions change; mechanical invention revolutionizes travel and transportation; the horse no longer plays a prominent part in the life of the average man and woman, and in our big cities there are little children who are as surprised at the sight of a horse as they would be at that of a polar bear.

But man still breeds the horse for profit and pleasure, and there's a fascination about this affair next week that you'll never find at an automobile show.

One thousand thoroughbreds are stabled luxuriously in the basement of the New Garden. Nearly as many grooms pet and pamper them and make them ready for Monday's brilliant opening.

Monday will be "Governor's Day," with Governor Al Smith and Mrs. Smith doing the honors, and society at its smartest, just as it has turned out in its best bib and tucker each opening day of the National Horse Show for the past 42 years.

Cavalry officers from France, Poland, Canada and our own army will compete for a cup which has been donated by Jan Clechanowski, Polish Minister to Washington, for an international jumping contest.

The trophy is unique. It is the original King George III silver gilt hampered cup made by leading London silversmiths more than a century ago and presented by the British King to the Montgomeryshire Yeomanry Cavalry in 1816.

Perhaps the most picturesque event of next week's show will be an exhibition of four-in-hands, driven by some of the famous "whips" of the horsey Nineties.

Ten historic coaches, including William H. Vanderbilt's "Venture," Reggie Rives' "Pioneer," and the famous old "Tantivy"—vehicles which covered many a mile in the days when a smart four-in-hand was the equivalent of the Twentieth Century Limited—will be driven around the ring on exhibition twice a day.

Sportsmen worth millions will be on the boxes "tooling" the four-in-hands, while from the box of each a veteran guard will "wind" the five-foot horn which in the old days always announced the coach's arrival at a town or relay station.

Those were the days before towns were guarded by speed limit signs and red and green traffic lights, and there was a kick in the "winding" horn not to be found in the raucous blare of a klaxon.

Los Angeles, Nov. 2.—Ace Hudkins, the Lincoln, Neb., "Wildcat," will lay aside his boxing gloves forever if he misses his life-long ambition to be a champion by failing to beat Joe Dundee, welterweight title holder, here tomorrow night.

The whirlwind battler will make the move "for his health's sake," he said here today.

But he intends to do it — with qualifications.

The qualifying statement is this: "I intend to beat Dundee and send him back to Baltimore a wiser, but battered ex-champion. I know his style, and I don't see how I can lose, but if I do, it's two or maybe three 'windup' fights and then the perpetual showers for Ace Hudkins."

"I slug and I get slugged. My style of fighting gets the results, but I get plenty of punishment. They'll tell you I like punishment. Well, hard knocks don't mean much to me, but I'm going to quit while I have my health. I've drawn big crowds, and I've saved my money."

"But if you 'beat' Dundee, what then?" Ace was asked.

"When I'm champion," he replied with accent on the "champion," "I'll take them all on—the more the merrier."

Hudkins is now 22 and has traveled through the flyweight, bantamweight, featherweight, lightweight and junior welterweight divisions without a title.

Now the Nebraskan of California adoption stands on the threshold of his big chance.

When arraigned Tuesday, Nelson pleaded not guilty and only five jurors were in the box at the opening of court today.

MICKEY WALKER HAS HIGH HOPES OF GAINING THIRD TITLE

HAS EASY VICTORY OVER

MIKE McTIGUE

BEAT HIM TO THE FLOOR IN THE FIRST ROUND LAST NIGHT

USED SERIES OF RIGHTS AND LEFTS TO BODY, AND RIGHT TO JAW

By BERTY M. DENBY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Mickey Walker, who has possessed both the welterweight and middleweight world's boxing championships, today held high hopes of gaining a third title—the light heavyweight.

Mickey's opinion followed an easy victory which he scored over the venerable Mike McTigue here last night.

Walker beat McTigue to the floor in the first round, using a series of rights and lefts to the body and a crashing right to the jaw.

Before McTigue was counted out he showed one of the gamiest streaks ever exhibited in the prize ring. Victim of what might termed a lucky punch, a right to the jaw, Mickey landed as the round opened, McTigue was groggy from the start.

Walker followed his right to the jaw with several lefts to the head which finally sent Mike to the floor for the count of nine.

His eyes glazed, McTigue came up and gamely tried to stave off Walker's blows. However, he went down again for the count of eight.

As the referee started nine, McTigue grabbed a rope, pulled himself to a standing posture, turned toward Mickey with a sickly sort of smile and stood with his arms down. The expression on his face seemed to say:

"I'm whipped but they won't count Mike McTigue out until he's unconscious."

The last time McTigue got up he didn't have a chance in the world to stand but the Irish nerve wouldn't allow him to stay down.

As a result of the victory, Walker invades the light heavyweight class and has announced he is after Jimmy Slattery, chief claimant to the title.

Walker previously has held the welterweight, and is the present holder of the middleweight championship.

'SPIDER' KELLY LOSES OUT IN LAST FIGHT

LONG-ARMED LITTLE IRISHMAN ONCE FACED GANS FOR 25 ROUNDS

"SPIDER" WANTED TO DIE IN 'FRISCO, SCENE OF EARLY TRIUMPHS

By RICHARD BALDWIN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

San Francisco, Nov. 2.—"Spider" Kelly, the wiry, long-armed little Irishman who stood up against the mighty attack of Joe Gans for twenty-five slashing rounds, was cheated by fate out of the chance to fight his last battle in the city where he rose to fame.

"Spider" died yesterday—in a hospital at Rochester, Minn., far from home. He will be brought back to San Francisco for burial beside the bodies of his father and mother.

But "Spider," whose real name was James Patrick Curtin, wanted to die here, near the scene of his early triumphs and defeats and among the friends who had known him at the height of his ring career.

Before leaving San Francisco for Rochester to undergo a mastoid operation, he told his friends he would rather "hear the final gong here than in any other spot in the world."

The old timers today were reminiscing about the fiery little Irishman whose vituperous tongue was nearly as deadly as his flashing fists.

Those of them who had been at the ringside in New York when Kelly stayed upright against Joe Gans through the 25 terrible rounds, said he managed to do so only because he had Gans "guessing what it was all about."

Many a time, those old friends said, after Kelly had forsaken the ring to train and second fighters his lashing tongue spurred many an apparently beaten man on to greater efforts and victory.

"Spider learned to fight in the streets and continued to fight because he loved to."

Tim McGrath, San Francisco boxing promoter and perhaps the closest friend of Kelly, told of the early struggles of his pal to gain entrance into the fighting ranks.

"He was a great lad and how he loved to fight," said McGrath. "Kelly and I were boys together. We played together and we fought together."

"He had to fight in the old saloons and resorts of the Barbary Coast to gain recognition and in those days to come out of a fight unmaimed, one had to fight and to be clever."

"It was there he developed his fighting ability, and learned to use his head as well as his fists."

Kelly retired from the ring 25 years ago and became a trainer with McGrath for his partner. Together they groomed and seconded such men as Young Corbett, Jimmy Britt, Abe Attell, Joe Thomas, 'Sailor Jack' Sharkey and the burly Jim Jeffries.

E. S. BARNARD ELECTED PRESIDENT AMERICAN LEAGUE

By CLARK B. KELSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Nov. 2.—E. S. Barnard, president of the Cleveland Indians, today was elected president of the American League, succeeding Byron Bancroft Johnson.

Directors of the league met here in special session to elect Barnard. William Harridge, for years secretary to Johnson, was elected secretary of the league.

Today's session of the league presidents was in marked contrast to most of their meetings in recent years, which have been characterized by bitter disputes between Johnson and other officials. Today it was evident that the utmost harmony existed. Proceedings were carried out with great formality.

The election session was executive and lasted for more than two hours. After it was over, Harridge announced the elections to waiting newspapermen. He said salary figures would not be announced. It had been widely reported that Barnard was to receive $40,000 a year.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY
UNITED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

Three million dollars worth of thoroughbred horseflesh, groomed to glossy perfection and with a ribbon in its tail, will strut across the tanbark of Madison Square Garden next week in the annual, ever-fascinating spectacle of the National Horse Show.

Customs and fashions change; mechanical invention revolutionizes travel and transportation; the horse no longer plays a prominent part in the life of the average man and woman, and in our big cities there are little children who are as surprised at the sight of a horse as they would be at that of a polar bear.

But man still breeds the horse for profit and pleasure, and there's a fascination about this affair next week that you'll never find at an automobile show.

One thousand thoroughbreds are stabled luxuriously in the basement of the New Garden. Nearly as many grooms pet and pamper them and make them ready for Monday's brilliant opening.

Monday will be "Governor's Day," with Governor Al Smith and Mrs. Smith doing the honors, and society at its smartest, just as it has turned out in its best bib and tucker each opening day of the National Horse Show for the past 42 years.

Cavalry officers from France, Poland, Canada and our own army will compete for a cup which has been donated by Jan Clechanowski, Polish Minister to Washington, for an international jumping contest.

The trophy is unique. It is the original King George III silver gilt hammered cup made by leading London silversmiths more than a century ago and presented by the British King to the Montgomeryshire Yeomanry Cavalry in 1816.

Perhaps the most picturesque event of next week's show will be an exhibition of four-in-hands, driven by some of the famous "whips" of the horse Nineties.

Ten historic coaches, including William H. Vanderbilt's "Venture," Regie Rives' "Pioneer," and the famous old "Tantivy"—vehicles which covered many a mile in the days when a smart four-in-hand was the equivalent of the Twentieth Century Limited—will be driven around the ring on exhibition twice a day.

Sportsmen worth millions will be on the boxes "tooling" the four-in-hands, while from the box of each a veteran guard will "wind" the five-foot horn which in the old days always announced the coach's arrival at a town or relay station.

Those were the days before towns were guarded by speed limit signs and red and green traffic lights, and there was a kick in the "winding" horn not to be found in the raucous blare of a klaxon.

Other defendants in the case were given until Friday to appear. Andrew Emanuel Nelson, former state securities commissioner, also indicted with Cochran, appeared in the courtroom. He was arraigned several weeks ago and pleaded not guilty.

"NEW FRANCE" MINE OF LEGENDARY LORE

Ancient Tales of the St. Lawrence Kept Alive.

Montreal.—"I never knew that there was so much romance and legendary history connected with the St. Lawrence river," said A. C. Elworthy of Chicago, who just returned on the Empress of Scotland after a tour of the principal countries of Europe, including a river trip on the famous Rhine.

"The Rhine," he said, "is not as long or wide or picturesque as the St. Lawrence, although there are more castles and ancient buildings on it. But for beautiful scenery, mountains, lofty cliffs and farmlands I do not think there is any other river in the world to compare with the St. Lawrence."

"Legends and stories of long ago still haunt the shores of that 'sacred stream,' the river St. Lawrence, which was the first highway into the unknown continent of North America, the Middle West. A panorama of mystery and beauty was unfolded to the early-day explorers, such as Jacques Cartier, who sailed down the river forty-three years after America was discovered."

"After leaving that little bit of transplanted Brittany, Quebec, we pass the Isle Madame, where treasures were buried by early-day adventurers and pirates; then comes the Isle of Bacchus, so named by Cartier because of the wild grapes he found there; Riviere-du-Loup, harking back to the time when packs of wolves frequented its banks, and then comes the lofty crags guarding the entrance to dark and austere Saguenay river. This is a region wherein was erected the first church in America, recalling the very origin of Canadian history."

Most Ancient Legend.

"I shall give a few of the legends of the country traversed by this mighty river."

"Two heroic figures, John Norton, a famous trapper of olden days, and Atla, last descendant of the Iberian or Basque people, appear in the most ancient of all Canadian legends. We see them flying for their lives before walls of searing flames on their way to Mamelone, the great sand mounds, believed to be the old geologic benches of earliest time, that tower above the region we call Tadoussac. There on the shifting golden sands we are told that Basque fathers of the race that had dwelt immemorially among the mountains of Spain anchored ships 'before the years of men,' and that, later, savage battles were fought out between tribes and peoples now forgotten."

"It was at the period when great earthquakes appeared in this region, giving rise, for instance, to such a name as Les Eboulements, that a chief of the Lenni-Lenape Indians had married a Basque princess who died leaving a daughter, Atla, the last of the race. The doom following this intermarriage which, it was prophesied would bring ruin and extinction to the tribe, could only be averted by the birth of a child whose father was free of the 'cross of red and white.'"

"It seemed as though this might come to pass, for Atla and her English lover were on their way to the priest at Mamelone when their fate overtook them. No trapper sees the red hand of bush fire on the Laurentian hills without remembering their rush through the woods as hot as hell. Like burning arrows they sped along the ridge that edges the monstrous rock, called in a later day 'Cape Trinity.' And where the rock drops sheer they plunged into the black waters of the Saguenay, were rescued and taken to Tadoussac. But just as the holy man met them, with ring and hook, 'a heavy shadow fell over the land,' and the earth took back the daughter of her old race."

"It is said that on that high crest, whose sands first saw the sunrise of the world, she keeps beyond doom and fate, a symbol of old birthright in Canada."

The Phantom Head.

"Two centuries ago the canoe men at Pointe Levis led a dangerous life in winter crossing to Quebec in canoes or dugouts, and the legend of the 'Phantom Head' is still being told."

"On a cold wintry night one Peter Soulard, vainglorious and boastful, took a boatful of passengers from Levis to go to Quebec. They were all drowned in the ice jams except Peter and one paddler. However, later on Peter was caught in a knife-like wedge of ice, thin and keen, which struck him a blow in the neck. His head bounded off and slid away, leaving a crimson trail behind it, and today the legend goes that a sailor sometimes sees emerging from the pale darkness a slab of floating silver on which seems to move restlessly a dark, shapeless thing. It is Peter's head, the 'Phantom Head' of one who thought he could outwit the ice. 'And they who see it must die within the year,' the legend goes."

vits, they heard him talking about the case."

Kidwell admitted he drank with the two.

The mild tone of Justice Siddons' decision discharging the jury and ordering a mistrial, surprised prosecution chief Roberts, who said he expected the judge to emphasize more the gravity of the charges.

Justice Siddons addressed the jurors as soon as they were seated. "I think it but fair to the other members of the panel for the court to say to Juror Kidwell that among the affidavits are certain statements. I call your attention to the existence of these affidavits. They are open to inspection to you or any one else. I am not asking you, Mr. Kidwell, to make any statement at this time, but am calling your attention to the affidavits."

"Unanimous judgment was expressed by counsel on both sides regarding the action that should be taken in this case. There was no dissenting view expressed to the statements that a mistrial should be declared and the jury be dismissed."

"Wide publicity has been given to the affidavits and the proceedings in chambers concerning them. This constitutes an additional reason for the action the court is about to take. The court agrees that the matter is one of grave concern to the administration of justice in this case. The precise mode of dismissing the case is not important."

"So I think I will withdraw the juror and dismiss the jury. Ladies and gentlemen, your service in this case has terminated, and you are finally excused."

Our Customers Write the Best Ads for ISO=VIS!

Ever since it was put on the market last winter, letters have come pouring in by the thousands from enthusiastic customers praising Iso-Vis.

Because they relate how Iso-Vis has worked in their cars—because they give frank, unsolicited opinions, we believe they are the best "ads" that could be written about this extraordinary motor oil.

They tell in the everyday language of actual use what we mean by such terms as "constant viscosity". They are actual records of the unusual service Iso-Vis gives. We quote at random:

From a letter written by Mr. W. P. Renner, of Sikeston, Missouri—"I have used your Iso-Vis for several months. I ran the first five quarts twelve hundred miles, and the second five about 2,250 miles, without adding any in my Chevrolet. The pressure gauge never weakened, was always good."

"I am now driving twice as far as I did on other oils before draining the crankcase and when I do drain it I notice the body is still good," says Mr. W. A. Branscome of the Geo. H. Lee Co., 1115-1117 Harney St., Omaha, Nebraska.

From the proprietor of the Balsam Lake Service Station, Balsam Lake, Wis.—Mr. John Boeris—"I know I will not be able to sell as much oil to a customer as I did before, but more customers will make up for it."

From a letter written by Mr. Floyd Goodrich, Treasurer of the Waterloo Concrete Corporation, of Waterloo, Iowa—"As a result of our test on the two cars, we some six weeks later adopted Iso-Vis for our entire fleet of cars and trucks. Our experience leads us to believe that it is the best oil which we have ever used for automobile and truck service."

"I can truthfully say that Iso-Vis is the cheapest and best lubrication money can buy," quoted from the letter of Mr. A. D. Thomas, of Eldorado Illinois.

There is another advantage in quoting letters. They say more than modesty would permit us to say about our own product! We suggest that you give Iso-Vis a trial and judge it by the only real standard—its performance in your car! 30c per quart.

"NEW FRANCE" MINE OF LEGENDARY LORE

Ancient Tales of the St. Lawrence Kept Alive.

Montreal.—"I never knew that there was so much romance and legendary history connected with the St. Lawrence river," said A. C. Elworthy of Chicago, who just returned on the Empress of Scotland after a tour of the principal countries of Europe, including a river trip on the famous Rhine.

"The Rhine," he said, "is not as long or wide or picturesque as the St. Lawrence, although there are more castles and ancient buildings on it. But for beautiful scenery, mountains, lofty cliffs and farmlands I do not think there is any other river in the world to compare with the St. Lawrence."

Legends and stories of long ago still haunt the shores of that "sacred stream," the river St. Lawrence, which was the first highway into the unknown continent of North America, the Middle West. A panorama of mystery and beauty was unfolded to the early-day explorers, such as Jacques Cartier, who sailed down the river forty-three years after America was discovered.

"After leaving that little bit of transplanted Brittany, Quebec, we pass the Isle Madam, where treasures were buried by early-day adventurers and pirates; then comes the Isle of Bacchus, so named by Cartier because of the wild grapes he found there; Riviere-du-Loup, harkening back to the time when packs of wolves frequented its banks, and then comes the lofty crags guarding the entrance to dark and austere Saguenay river. This is a region wherein was erected the first church in America, recalling the very origin of Canadian history."

Most Ancient Legend.
"I shall give a few of the legends of the country traversed by this mighty river."

"Two heroic figures, John Norton, a famous trapper of olden days, and Atla, last descendant of the Iberian or Basque people, appear in the most ancient of all Canadian legends. We see them flying for their lives before walls of searing flames on their way to Mamelone, the great sand mounds, believed to be the old geologic beaches of earliest time, that tower above the region we call Tadousac. There on the shifting golden sands we are told that Basque fathers of the race that had dwelt immemorially among the mountains of Spain anchored ships 'before the years of men,' and that, later, savage battles were fought out between tribes and peoples now forgotten."

"It was at the period when great earthquakes appeared in this region, giving rise, for instance, to such a name as Les Eboulements, that a chief of the Lemni-Lenape Indians had married a Basque princess who died leaving a daughter, Atla, the last of the race. The doom following this intermarriage which, it was prophesied would bring ruin and extinction to the tribe, could only be averted by the birth of a child whose father was free of the 'cross of red and white.'"

"It seemed as though this might come to pass, for Atla and her English lover were on their way to the priest at Mamelone when their fate overtook them. No trapper sees the red hand of bush fire on the Laurentian hills without remembering their rush through the woods as hot as hell. Like burning arrows they sped along the ridge that edges the monstrous rock, called in a later day 'Cape Trinity.' And where the rock drops sheer they plunged into the black waters of the Saguenay, were rescued and taken to Tadousac. But just as the holy man met them, with ring and book, 'a heavy shadow fell over the land,' and the earth took back the daughter of her old race."

"It is said that on that high crest, whose sands first saw the sunrise of the world, she keene beyond doom and fate, a symbol of old birtiright in Canada."

The Phantom Head.
"Two centuries ago the canoe men at Pointe Levis led a dangerous life in winter crossing to Quebec in canoes or dugouts, and the legend of the 'Phantom Head' is still being told."

"On a cold wintry night one Peter Souland, valinglorious and boastful, took a boatful of passengers from Levis to go to Quebec. They were all drowned in the ice jams except Peter and one paddler. However, later on Peter was caught in a knife-like wedge of ice, thin and keen, which struck him a blow in the neck. His head bounded off and slid away, leaving a crimson trail behind it, and today the legend goes that a sailor sometimes sees emerging from the pale darkness a slab of floating silver on which seems to move restlessly a dark, shapeless thing. It is Peter's head, the 'Phantom Head' of one who thought he could outwit the ice. 'And they who see it must die within the year,' the legend goes."

Pans $200 Gold a Week Near Heart of Denver

Denver, Colo.—Edward Manion, a mining engineer familiar with gold mining operations in Colorado in the 1849 "rush," has discovered that he can still get $200 worth of gold a week from a creek within walking distance of Denver's business district. He found that waste sand washed from gravel taken out of the creek has a high gold content.

All in Point of View
She sat in the garden, comfortably ensconced before her broiled live lobster. Suddenly, in a green corner of the sward she discovered a turtle in the act of eating a worm. The living ribbon wriggled in agony as it grew shorter and shorter with each opening of the turtle's mouth. "Ugh!" she exclaimed. "Ain't nature cruel! It's ruined my appetite. My dinner is wrecked. Take it away!"—Isaac Goldberg in the Reflex.

FALL-SINCLAIR OIL CASE ENDS IN A MISTRIAL

vits, they heard him talking about the case."

Kidwell admitted he drank with the two.

The mild tone of Justice Siddons' decision discharging the jury and ordering a mistrial, surprised prosecution chief Roberts, who said he expected the judge to emphasize more the gravity of the charges.

Justice Siddons addressed the jurors as soon as they were seated.

"I think it but fair to the other members of the panel for the court to say to Juror Kidwell that among the affidavits are certain statements. I call your attention to the existence of these affidavits. They are open to inspection to you or any one else. I am not asking you, Mr. Kidwell, to make any statement at this time, but am calling your attention to the affidavits."

"Unanimous judgment was expressed by counsel on both sides regarding the action that should be taken in this case. There was no dissenting view expressed to the statements that a mistrial should be declared and the jury be dismissed."

"Wide publicity has been given to the affidavits and the proceedings in chambers concerning them. This constitutes an additional reason for the action the court is about to take. The court agrees that the matter is one of grave concern to the administration of justice in this case. The precise mode of dismissing the case is not important."

"So I think I will withdraw the juror and dismiss the jury. Ladies and gentlemen, your service in this case has terminated, and you are finally excused."

Our Customers Write the Best Ads for ISO=VIS!

Ever since it was put on the market last winter, letters have come pouring in by the thousands from enthusiastic customers praising Iso-Vis.

Because they relate how Iso-Vis has worked in their cars—because they give frank, unsolicited opinions, we believe they are the best "ads" that could be written about this extraordinary motor oil.

They tell in the everyday language of actual use what we mean by such terms as "constant viscosity". They are actual records of the unusual service Iso-Vis gives. We quote at random:

From a letter written by Mr. W. P. Renner, of Sikeston, Missouri—"I have used your Iso-Vis for several months. I ran the first five quarts twelve hundred miles, and the second five about 2,250 miles, without adding any in my Chevrolet. The pressure gauge never weakened, was always good."

"I am now driving twice as far as I did on other oils before draining the crankcase and when I do drain it I notice the body is still good," says Mr. W. A. Branscome of the Geo. H. Lee Co., 1115-1117 Harney St., Omaha, Nebraska.

From the proprietor of the Balsam Lake Service Station, Balsam Lake, Wis.—Mr. John Boeris—"I know I will not be able to sell as much oil to a customer as I did before, but more customers will make up for it."

From a letter written by Mr. Floyd Goodrich, Treasurer of the Waterloo Concrete Corporation, of Waterloo, Iowa—"As a result of our test on the two cars, we some six weeks later adopted Iso-Vis for our entire fleet of cars and trucks. Our experience leads us to believe that it is the best oil which we have ever used for automobile and truck service."

"I can truthfully say that Iso-Vis is the cheapest and best lubrication money can buy," quoted from the letter of Mr. A. D. Thomas, of Eldorado Illinois.

There is another advantage in quoting letters. They say more than modesty would permit us to say about our own product! We suggest that you give Iso-Vis a trial and judge it by the only real standard—its performance in your car! 30c per quart.

In the Aulger Brothers' production of "Mother's Millions," the star part will be played by Myra Jefferson. Miss Jefferson is the new character woman with the Aulger Company and to introduce her over their territory it would be hard to find a better character role than the part of "Harriet Breen" in "Mother's Millions."

Louise Sherwood, the clever young leading lady will be seen to good advantage as Faire Breen, a sweet lovable girl, and daughter of the eccentric old lady.

The company is comprised of sixteen people including their own concert orchestra.

The repertoire of plays this season includes "Mother's Millions," "Strange Bedfellows," "Mary's Ankle," "Lilac Time," "The Horse Thief," "The Little Spit Fire," "What Anne Brought Home," and "What is Love."

The vaudeville between acts is exceptionally good. Curtain rises promptly at 8:30.

ROTARIANS HONOR PUBLIC TEACHERS

Over 80 Guests at the Annual Banquet Given at Ransford Hotel Last Night

DR. C. A. PAYNE SPEAKER

Gives Glowing Portrayal of "The Romance of the Northwest," and Given Ovation

It was Teachers Night at the Rotarians last night and over 80 guests, public school teachers of the city were honored by being feted at the annual banquet of the club at the Ransford hotel.

The speaker of the evening was Dr. Charles A. Payne of Milwaukee, Wis., whose topic was "The Romance of the Northwest." In graphic language he painted the days of the pioneers, the covered wagon, the great trek through the west to permanent homes, the wonderful scenery of mountains and lakes on the way, the coming of modern transportation, the growth of cities and villages, the commerce of the west, etc. His address was embellished by stereopticon pictures, colored in marvelous manner. He was given an ovation at the close and the gratitude of the club was expressed by the chairman of the evening, Dr. Payne came through the special offices of the Northern Pacific railway company.

Butler Brothers presented an excellent menu in which spring turkey and all the accompaniments predominated. There was wonderful service too, for all were quickly served. Table decorations were beautiful and with those on the walls reflected the Halloween spirit.

An orchestra furnished music. County Attorney Walter F. Wieland presided as master of ceremonies. Miss Mary Tornstrom and Miss Louise Barrett were voted the two most popular teachers, and both gave short talks.

An elaborate stunt program was prepared by Drs. George Ribbel and R. A. Beise, assisted by Carl Zapfe, Robert Nicholl, V. E. Schedin, N. P. Olmsted, W. H. Gemmell and William V. Turcotte.

Community singing was led by Frank Johnson and Miss Rickard with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Walter F. Wieland. A trio in flapper clothes, A. C. Ebert, Frank Johnson and B. Perry Netwon sang a three verse skit dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Cobb.

The banquet started with singing "America" and closed with "Auld Lang Syne." Arrangements for the successful banquet reflected credit on Chairman S. R. Adair and his co-workers of the Fellowship committee of the Rotary club.

Halloween Party

Miss Ellen Rosko entertained at a Halloween party Monday afternoon. The rooms were effectively decorated with black cats and witches and orange pumpkins. The afternoon was spent in playing various games and performing stunts. A dainty luncheon was served at the close of the afternoon.

Among the guests were Jean Hagberg, James Frederick, Virginia Gendron, Helen Fox and Bernice Nelson.

Handsome Draperies for Every Room

Charm of Exterior And Interior Depends Upon Artistic Curtaining

To the passerby and the guest within your walls the windows are one of the chief indications of the character of your home.

The window is the only feature which plays an equally important part, whether viewed from the outside or from the inside.

If the windows are artistically curtained, and hung with draperies which have been carefully selected, they inevitably denote a home in which cheerfulness and good taste reign supreme.

These beautiful draperies which we are showing will be the kind you will wish to have to procure the effect you so much desire, and we should like to show you these and help in the selection of your needs.

"IRISH HEARTS," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Sheila Kildare and her father emigrate to America to follow Emmett Murtough to whom she is betrothed. Murtough joins a bootlegging band and Sheila is befriended by the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer. Murtough, influenced by a cabaret girl, betrays his band and the rivals carry away $150,000 contraband. The hit-jackers in turn double cross him and he is exiled with threats of death. Rory begins to court Sheila to the delight of his parents.

"Soon you'll be stopping work, Sheila," Rory said to her one night when he called to take her home. "And I've got a surprise for you, some good news."

"An' what can it be, Rory?" "I'm going into business."

"With Tim?"

"With Tim himself. We settled it last night. I'm putting in my money toward buying a new truck he needs, and that'll give me a share in the profits. Oh, it isn't much, but I'm to earn fair wages at the same time."

"You're not going to fight any more?"

Rory laughed. He held out his right hand then so she might examine it under the lamplight. "Not with that mit," he said.

"An' what happened to it?" asked Sheila.

"Oh, I fought a bare knuckle fight for the biggest prize in the world one night," he said.

"An' ye told me nothing about it?"

"Nor am I going to tell you now. It's forgotten, but I had to take up a business and give up my profession," he smiled. Nor would he say more. But Old Mike O'Shea, who now looked upon Sheila as a new daughter come to grace his family, did tell her and proudly, for the old man took pride in the son that could win so fine a girl.

"Ye see, they told it to me at the Club, for sure, an' Rory would never say a word about it, an' him weighing a little over a hundred and thirty-three, the big one weighing more like a hundred and seventy."

"But who was he?"

"It was your fine friend, Murtough, and it was the night of the dance. D'ye remember now, when Rory came back, what with his eye turning black and half shut and a bump on his jaw as big as me hand?" That was exaggeration for Mike O'Shea had a hand so large that it would cover both jaws of a man. "An' Rory took him into the storeroom and they had a fight. It must have been a grand sight, an' I've never forgiven Rory for not calling me down to see it!"

"Your former friend Murtough, as strong as a bull, so Mammie Crocker told me, but he didn't know the science that my lad knew an' he whaled and flailed into Rory, but sure he was like a cat, now, and then gone again. And Rory stepping in and tearing his face to ribbons. But Rory had to finish the job, so he waited an' when his chance came he stuck out with his right an' the great jaw of Murtough took the blow. An', Rory followed it up with another to the chin! That finished his hand, three of his knuckles were broken, an' he must have his arm in a cast, but he didn't say a word about it, an' he was all right, now did ye?"

"But why did they fight? I knew they had, but what was it about?"

"Sure, an' didn't Murtough get engaged to himself, while all the time he was telling this other fellow that he was engaged to her?"

"But Rory didn't like to have ye deceived, darling."

"But Rory never told me."

"An' he wouldn't. Sure an' it's becoming of me to praise my own son, but Sheila, he's a fine boy and ye could do no better than marry him."

Sheila blushed. "But he hasn't asked me," she admitted.

"Hasn't asked ye?" Old Mike was astounded. "Sure, the young devil, I'll be talking to him this night, I will."

"But, I think, Father O'Shea," whispered Sheila into his ear, "that maybe he is going to."

"An' what kind of a girl are ye, that would be walking out with a man every single night an' not steering him into proposing, I'd like to know," declared the elder O'Shea indignantly, but with a twinkle in his eye. "It seems to be ye're not such a smart girl after all at all."

"An' d'ye think I'd be leading such a poor innocent into a noose, Daddy O'Shea?" cried Sheila. "Is it that kind of a girl ye'll be thinking me to be?"

The old man laughed. "Poor innocent! An' him giving ye orders the very first night he takes ye under his arm."

"Orders?"

"Sure, an' didn't I hear then, when he sent us home an' paraded ye among all his friends at the Dance?" Old Michael laughed again. "Indeed an' indeed ye'll be finding out what the O'Shea family is. Miss Kildare, when ye become a part of it! I'll tell ye 'tis the men that rule the house and—"

"Michael!" Kathie's voice sounded from the kitchen.

Old Mike O'Shea started. Here he was in the midst of a great boast, and there was Kathie! He looked at Sheila and then he smiled and his eyes twinkled again.

"But no man can rule his own house unless he has the right wife," he said.

"Michael!"

"Yes, my dear."

Sheila laughed and in the very middle of her laughter a sob rose in her throat. How dear, how dear was this dear, dear couple, the father and mother of her own Rory!

"Oh, Daddy O'Shea, 'tis brave ye are an' if only Rory takes after ye, I'll be happy for all my days."

And Sheila flung her arms about him and kissed him full upon the lips. Kathie walked in.

"Is it all the men in my family ye want?" demanded the old lady.

"Oh, an' maybe I do, maybe I do, Mother O'Shea," Sheila cried as she ran to her and kissed her.

It was upon this scene that Rory entered and he said no word to his father, but running to Kathie and Sheila he gathered the two women he loved most in his arms and held them.

"Rory," cried Sheila, "an' ye're putting ye arms around me."

"And it's there that I'll be keeping them, Sheila, darling."

"That's not the way to say it," spoke up old Mike. "That was not the way when ye mother an' me took to the winding roads beyond Knockrotherum. Why don't ye ask her, lad? Why don't ye ask her?"

"Yes, and would it be here with a lot of people about, and maybe my tongue will hesitate and the words won't come out, and what will I do then?" And Rory seemed to be at his most serious moment.

"Mother," said Michael, "let us see how the supper is."

"Michael," said Kathie, "let us see how the supper is getting on."

"Indeed we will, Kathie," said old man O'Shea, as he followed his wife into the kitchen in the back.

"Rory, Rory!" Sheila whispered the name.

"An' will ye marry me?" asked Rory.

"Is this the first time ye've asked me," she objected as she felt his arms surround her. A knock on the door.

"But will ye marry me?" insisted the O'Shea.

"Ye father tells me ye are hard men, the O'Sheas," murmured Sheila against his breast. "An' that ye do rule the house."

"Michael! Have ye forgotten all ye reason? To be putting the kettle on without any water in it!"

"Dear Rory, what hard men the O'Sheas are!"

A kiss and Rory disengaged himself as another rap sounded on the door. He walked to the door and Sheila promptly addressed herself to the business of looking less flushed and very calmly Rory opened the door. At the entrance stood Old Tom Kildare.

"Mister Kildare, an' will ye be the first to congratulate us?"

Old Tom looked at the pair of them. He sniffed at the moment the flavor of supper about to be laid.

"Ye were made for her, boy," he said, "an' she could not do better in all Killamauk."

"Come into the kitchen, Mr. Kildare," cried Michael. "There's a bit of something waiting for ye here."

Old Tom passed through the door and Rory O'Shea gathered Sheila in his arms.

"Rory!"

And in the heart of Sheila and in the heart of Rory O'Shea there was a singing that which only Irish Hearts can hear.
